GERMANS BOMB SHETLANDS

LONDON, Nov. 22 (AP)—German planes today dropped bombs in a raid over Shetland Islands, off the northern coast of Scotland.

Air raid alarms in one of the island towns were followed quickly by the "all-clear" signal.

ANTI-NAZI PURGE BY GESTAPO

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Nov. 22 (INS)—A systematic campaign to wipe out every last vestige of internal opposition within the Reich was predicted by well-informed Berlin quarters today in the wake of the confession by George Elser, 36-year-old German citizen, that he set the time bomb which nearly claimed the life of Adolf Hitler in Munich on Nov. 8.

Nazi Germany virtually declared war upon the anti-Nazi "Black Front," governed from abroad by Otto Strasser, officially described as a "renegade," who was named along with "British agents" as spiritual author of the assassination attempt.

Other War News on Pages 12, 13, 14, 15

Strasser is a former Nazi leader. "Further sensations" were promised by Nazi spokesmen who identified Elser—still a mysterious and enigmatic prisoner—as "merely a tool" in the conspiracy aimed at the assassination of Hitler and other leading members of the Nazi regime.

Elser's part in the attempted killing was merely that of a technical assistant, it was said. Considerable stress was laid upon the arrest of two men described as British agents—a "Mr. Best and a Captain Stevens."

NAB BRITISH AGENTS

These two men were taken into custody when they attempted to cross the Dutch-German border at Tracer bullets were fired as the planes circled, dropping bombs.

Six planes took part in the raid, but failed to score any hits, British sources announced.

Anti-aircraft guns also roared in South Essex during the afternoon, but villagers said no planes were visible.

An east coast anti-aircraft battery fired a dozen rounds at a German bomber flying out to sea. British planes followed the Nazi aircraft.

British Rout German Plane Over Thames

LONDON, Nov. 22 (INS)—British pursuit planes today engaged and drove off a single German aircraft which passed over the Thames river, about 23 miles from London. The German machine was subject to heavy anti-aircraft fire as soon as it appeared, forcing it to rise to a great height. It continued inland until forced to retreat by the British planes.

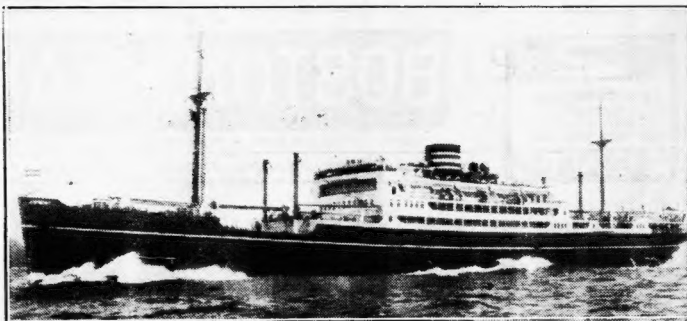

BERLIN, Nov. 22 (INS)—German naval officials said today they had no information regarding a report published in New York that a German submarine invaded the Firth of Forth in Scotland and attacked the British cruiser Belfast. It was stated, however, that the report was being "checked."

Dutch Cancel All Sailings

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22 (AP)—Netherlands ship owners, on advice of their government, today cancelled all sailings from Dutch ports. No explanation was given but the British yesterday that German export cargoes on neutral vessels were subject to seizure on the high seas.

The ship owners met to consider the current hazards to shipping, including the danger from mines.

The Holland-America liner Rotterdam left Rotterdam early today for New York before the ban was enforced. Doubt was expressed that the Rotterdam would return from the United States until the situation is clarified.

VICTIM OF MINE—Latest victim of Nazi mines is this Japanese luxury liner, the 11,930-ton Terukuni Maru, which went down off the east coast of England. Survivors were taken to Britain.

ITALIAN STEAMER DAMAGED BY MINE

LONDON, Nov. 22 (INS)—While Great Britain moved to place retaliatory measures against Germany's "blitzkrieg at sea" into immediate effect, another neutral vessel ran afoul of a mine today off the southeast coast of England.

It was announced that the Italian steamer Pianona received a serious hole in its hull when it struck a mine.

The crippled vessel remained afloat, however, and tugs today were trying to tow her to port. After the ship struck a mine, a lifeboat sped to the scene and stood by the rest of the night. It was understood that none of the ship's crew members was injured.

The vessel was bound for Rotterdam.

The Pianona is a 6660-ton freighter. It formerly was the Italian navy vessel Pola.

Meanwhile, experts drew up an order-in-council which, subject to approval of King George VI, was expected to be proclaimed within 24 hours.

It will state the precise terms and reason for adopting the plan to seize "exports of German origin or ownership."

In addition, it was learned, the order-in-council will explain whether such goods seized by the Allied navies will be impounded until the end of the war or confiscated outright.

Whitehall circles expressed hope the move will aid materially in cutting off the Reich from foreign exchange sources, disorganize German industry and upset Germany's war calculations.

It was clear that the decision to seize German exports was in direct retaliation for the action of Germany, according to British claims, in sowing mines off the British coast. During the last five days 17 ships have gone to the bottom around the British Isles, chiefly as a result of striking mines. If the Pianona sinks, it will be the 18th to go down in the current wave of maritime destruction.

Aerial activity over Great Britain continued last night with announcement by the air ministry that "enemy aircraft were observed over the east coast shortly after 7 p. m."

"The raiders," said the statement, "were reported flying at various altitudes. Fighter aircraft were sent up to intercept them and batteries of anti-aircraft guns engaged them."

"The raiders passed and the all-clear signal was given shortly before 8:30 p. m. No bombs were dropped."

War Diary

81st Day

Mounting maritime losses, aerial bombings and recriminations over the foiled Munich plot on Adolf Hitler's life further embittered today the warfare between Germany and Britain.

Nazi planes dropped bombs on the Shetland islands and a German plane was driven off after appearing high over the Thames river.

An Italian steamer struck a mine off the English coast where more than ten ships, including five neutrals, have gone down in the past five days.

The German freighter Bertha Fisser fell prey to a British warship near Iceland.

Britain accused Germans of loosing the mines and in retaliation announced a blockade of all German exports, designed to choke the Reich's trade. Berlin declared the British measure was certain to bring counter retaliation.

Unaccustomed light was thrown on the conflict of plot and counter-plot between secret agents by a German announcement of the seizure of two British secret operatives and the arrest of a Munich man for the Nov. 8 bomb attempt on Hitler's life.

The war remained quiescent on the western front, where France said there was "nothing important to report during the night."

ROOSEVELT TURKEY DAY EDICT HITS HIS FAMILY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)

—About half the country will observe Thanksgiving Day tomorrow, but the confusion which followed President Roosevelt's decision to advance the customary date has extended right into his own family.

The Chief Executive and the First Lady will have their turkey dinner tomorrow night at the Warm Springs, Ga., foundation for infantile paralysis patients. Some of their children, however, will observe tomorrow's holiday and the one proclaimed by governors in some states for Nov. 30.

James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son, will celebrate in New York tomorrow and then go to Massachusetts, which has selected the traditional last Thursday of November. Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt also will have their turkey at Nahant, Mass., on the "second Thanksgiving."

The governor of Texas proclaimed both Thursdays as a holiday, so Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt will have two dinners at their ranch near Fort Worth.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN ROOSEVELT

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., will have turkey tomorrow at their cottage in Charlottesville, Va., but next week they will have guests for Thanksgiving recess of the University of Virginia.

The President's daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger of Seattle, will follow her father's example and observe only the "first Thanksgiving."

N.Y. Mystery Woman Enters Dowd Case

A mysterious New York woman companion who was with John F. Dowd, fugitive sheriff indicted by the Suffolk County grand jury, is being sought today as the result of testimony given to the jury by a New York patrolman.

RIFT NEAR—Actress Jean Parker intends to divorce her newspaperman husband, George MacDonald, shown with her here, within ten days, she announced today. She blamed divergent careers for romance's end.

240 DUE FOR AXE ON JOBLESS BOARD

Discharge of 240 employees in the State Unemployment Compensation Division is slated for Dec. 1, it was announced today by Director J. Edwin Doyle.

Those to lose their jobs include temporary junior clerks whose places will be filled by redistribution of a number of permanent workers.

Doyle said the Federal Social Security Board declined to further approve payment of salaries for the present organization because it was unduly large in comparison with others states.

"The dropping of these temporary workers will be effected in accordance with Civil Service regulations," he stated. "No permanent Civil Service employees will be dropped."

"The division is now operating with approximately 3 per cent fewer employees than at the first of the year."

"The reduction in the size of the staff will make necessary a number of shifts throughout the organization so that there will be no hitch in speeding up the payment of claims, or adding to the effectiveness of the employment offices."

Horned Turkey Found in Jungle

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22 (AP)—Discovery of a horned turkey was announced today by the Academy of Natural Sciences.

It is a species of bird previously unknown. Except for a three-inch protuberance from its forehead, it resembles the common Thanksgiving Day fowl—and it's good to eat. The bird, found in South American jungle, was named "Pauzi Unicornis"—unicorn bird. The academy has received the skin of the bird from a member of the academy expedition.

The woman, according to Patrolman John Ronan, of the 19th New York precinct, drove away in a taxicab after dropping Dowd in 77th st., where a few minutes later he was found in an unconscious condition.

The officer said when he arrived at the scene a large crowd had gathered about the prostrate ex-sheriff.

Witnesses told him of the woman incident and since then a search has been on for both her and the cab driver who speeded her away.

BANK BOX OPENED

Ronan was brought here to testify by Dist. Atty. Foley, who spent two days in New York in an effort to locate the woman and certain bank accounts which Dowd is reported to have had there.

Meanwhile, Lieut. John J. Watkins, nad Special Officer Joseph J. Cunningham had opened a safety deposit vault at a Roxbury bank and examined the contents.

They had obtained a search warrant from Judge Frankland W. L. Miles, as soon as the Roxbury court opened today.

REPORTS TO FOLEY

They went to the bank and found that the only way the box could be opened would be to employ a safe expert. A half hour later the safe expert had the box opened and examination of its contents was started.

Rest Home Head Faces Court

Mrs. Hope Duris, attractive dark-eyed proprietress of a Brighton rest home, today faced in municipal court charges of larceny of $4335.58 from an 84-year-old patient.

Released in $2000 bail at a previous hearing, Mrs. Duris is accused of accompanying her aged patient, Mrs. Mary A. Howard, of West Brookline st., South End, to a downtown broker's office where Mrs. Howard cashed in stocks.

It is charged Mrs. Duris accepted the $4335.58 with the understanding it would be returned to Mrs. Howard at the rest home, but that she failed to do so.

Acquitting Jurors Guilty of Contempt

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP)—State-Supreme Court Justice Albert Conway today adjudged four members of a jury that acquitted seven men of conspiracy guilty of criminal contempt of court.

The court postponed until Monday sentence of jurors Milson M. Bassett, Robert W. Whiteside, John J. Gorman and John J. Pensky, members of a panel that exonerated former Police Commissioner James W. Higgins, former Erie County Democratic Chairman, Frank J. Carr and five co-defendants last month of conspiring to obstruct enforcement of gambling laws.

Hit Him Again, Cap'n!

It's What This Poor Fish Needs

The dragger Eddie N and Lulu M is tied up at the Fish Pier and Capt. Peter Marino is on deck, whistling through his teeth and curing a sturgeon's hangover by whacking him over the head with a mallet.

"Excuse me," said the reporter. "You say the fish has been drinking?"

Captain Marino popped the bottle, poured a glass of chianti for himself, the reporter and sturgeon.

The sturgeon took his snifter through the snout, flicked a fin and looked happier, even if he'd been out of water 30 hours.

Said Capt. Marino, without batting an eye:

"Yesterday we caught him 30 miles off Cape Cod. He was a beautiful sturgeon, so I laid him gently on the deck and fed him six shots of wine.

"He didn't die, he didn't thrash around, he just looked happy."

"So I kept feeding him more and more and he refused to die. He's had a gallon and a half."

"What's the idea?" asked the reporter.

"Just an old Mediterranean custom," said Capt. Marino.

"And the mallet?"

"We're curing his hangover," said the captain. "Besides we gotta eat."

So ends THAT fish story.

Posting Wife Error—Hutton

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (INS)—Franklyn L. Hutton, father of Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow, declared today that it was all a sad mistake when an advertisement appeared recently in New York newspapers saying he would not be responsible for his wife's debts.

Hutton, therefore, authorized this ad today:

"The notice inserted over my name on Oct. 18, 1939, was in error. I hereby withdraw it. Franklyn L. Hutton, 745 Fifth ave."

He asserted, however, that reports of a reconciliation between himself and the former Mrs. Irene Curley Hodde, to whom he was married March 5, 1928, were premature.

Flagship of Byrd Sails for Antarctic

Carrying the supplies of food necessary to keep Adm. Richard E. Byrd's third Antarctic expedition alive for 13 months on polar ice, the U. S. S. Bear of Oakland sailed from Boston today.

Piloting her down the harbor, as the police boat William H. McShane conveyed, was Capt. Joseph M. Lyons, veteran of the steamboat inspection service.

Under command of Lieut. Comdr. Richard H. Cruzen were navy bluejackets starting the longest trip ever made by a naval sailing vessel since the days of "wooden ships and iron men." Also aboard were 35 members of the expedition force.

80 DOGS ABOARD

A barkentine with a romantic past, the Bear was loaded to the limit today as 80 sled dogs yipped their forewell to Boston. Many of them may never again see their native country, as they do their part in the exploration of Antarctica.

The veteran ship last sailed as a naval vessel in 1884 when she rescued the survivors of the Lieut. A. W. Greely expedition near Cape Sabine. She was then transferred to the Coast Guard and saw service off the shores of Alaska, where her duties included hunting seal poachers, ferrying reindeer and acting as a relief ship for prospecting tenderfeet, and distressed theatrical troupes.

On her 12,000 mile jaunt she will first stop at Norfolk to take aboard a plane. It was first planned to load the aircraft here, but inclement weather prevented.

BOUGHT BY BYRD IN 1933

In 1933 she was purchased by Admiral Byrd at Oakland, Cal., where she was a museum ship. He replaced her obsolete auxiliary steam power plant with Diesel engines. She was refitted with a suit of sails and then set out on the admiral's second expedition.

For the third time today she faced a battle with South Polar ice floes and treacherous uncharted seas.

After Norfolk the ship will stop at Panama and from there will head for the Bay of Whales. On New Year's Day, if all goes well, she will rendezvous with the North Star, the expedition's first ship, which sailed from here last week. Admiral Byrd is now in Washington completing his plans with government officials. He will fly to Panama to go aboard the North Star there.

The North Star today sailed from Philadelphia. She is laden with scientific instruments for the expedition's use and also the famous snowmobile which attracted countrywide attention as it moved its gargantuan bulk to Boston from Chicago.

Both ships will meet at Panama when the admiral flies down from the nation's capital.

Nab N.H. Youth In Terre Haute

SEABROOK, N. H., Nov. 22—Hazen Carter, 23, reported missing from here three months ago with $800 belonging to his grandmother, is under arrest in Terre Haute, Ind., authorities here learned today.

Terre Haute police said Carter had no money and begged them for food when he surrendered.

The youth's grandmother, Mrs. Frank Carter, 70, received the $800 for settlement of an automobile accident, Seabrook police said.

Fights for Life In Auto Crash

Two young women were injured in a Mattapan accident today and a Chelsea man is near death at City Hospital following a crash on Main st., near City sq., Charlestown.

Beatrice Barker, 23, of Westview st., Dorchester, suffered a brain concussion and severe leg injuries and Marion Anna, 20, also of Dorchester, received leg cuts when two cars collided at Park and Spencer sts., Mattapan. Thomas J. Barry of Lombard st., Dorchester, and Peter Mladhe, River st., Hyde Park, named by police as the drivers, were only slightly hurt.

The Charlestown accident victim was Matthew J. O'Connell, 32, of Garfield ave., Chelsea, who was unconscious when police extricated him from the wreckage of his auto after it struck an Elevated upright.

Oklahoma Kidnap Killer Must Die

CHICAGO, Nov. 22 (INS)—A federal court jury today returned a verdict of guilty against Jack Russell, 39-year-old Oklahoma convict charged with the kidnaping of William S. Hamilton, young Kansas milling salesman. The jury, composed of seven women and five men, recommended the death penalty.

Hamilton was found shot to death in a field near Ringwood, Ill., last July 14 while Russell was in flight from the Oklahoma State Penitentiary.

Kennedy Son Gives Alarm for Blaze

PORTSMOUTH (R. I., Nov. 22)—Robert Kennedy, 13-year-old son of Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston, Ambassador to England, was the first to give the alarm when fire broke out in the roof of the gymnasium hall of the Portsmouth Priory School here. The blaze was fought by firemen from Governor Vanderbilt's Oakland Farm department and firemen from Fall River, Tiverton and Newport. Damage was estimated at $5000.

LOWELL GETS HUB PASTOR

The Rev. Lawrence W. Blackburn, assistant at the Cathedral of St. Paul, has accepted a call as rector of St. Ann's Episcopal Church in Lowell, effective Dec. 10, it was announced today.

Eskimos Go Hungry on Feast Day

BARROW, Alaska, Nov. 22 (AP)—Eskimos of this farthest north outpost had no juicy walrus meat nor even an abundance of the usually-plentiful whale or seal meat in their ice cellars today as they prepared for a bleak Thanksgiving Day of prayer and feasting on freshly-killed Polar bear.

Up here, where turkey is unknown, the Eskimos ask nothing better for a holiday feast than walrus meat. But hunger has come to many of the native families and more than half of the Eskimos' dogs have died of starvation or have been killed.

Prolonged summer and fall weather has robbed the Eskimos of their hunting on the ice for walrus.

Even the reindeer supply has dwindled to less than half what it was three years ago. Traders reported loss of several boats loaded with supplies during the fall trip to Barrow in turbulent seas.

"COOKING AROUND AMERICA"

Each of these interesting paintings concerns a mode of cooking native to the section of the country concerned, and for each section is given a number of unusual recipes for dishes which are popular there. For instance, for the painting, "The Northwest," one of the recipes given is for "fried trout" . . . and for "The South" one of the recipes is for "fried chicken" another for "cracker bread" and another for "buttermilk biscuits." We think that many Boston home-makers will find both the paintings and the recipes of extreme interest.

Check 1000 Cars In Hit-Run Death

Every automobile in Massachusetts of a certain type and model will be examined and their drivers questioned by State Police in an effort to find the hit-and-run driver who killed Richard G. Wheeler, Harvard graduate student, on the Worcester turnpike Nov. 2.

More than 1000 automobiles have been examined to date. Garages and repair shops have been asked to co-operate because it is known the hit-and-run car was damaged when it struck Wheeler down on his bicycle.

The automobile was caught in the car bumper and the fleeing driver turned into a side road in Southboro to free it. He left his fingerprints on the bicycle.

Maine Hunters Play It Safe

BIDDEFORD, Me., Nov. 22 (AP)—Nine members of the Stackpole family, hunting in woods near here, took no chances with strangers.

Other hunters were startled to find large printed signs tacked to trees in the vicinity reading: "Don't shoot it may be a Stackpole."

Almost every able-bodied man joined the hunt for the child who strayed from his yard clad only in a light brown sweater and a pair of blue overalls.

Search leaders regarded the rugged country and three successive nights of sub-freezing weather as too much handicap for a child of four and declared that if the lad really is lost in the hills there is almost no chance of his being found alive.

Possemen declared they had scanned every square foot of ground as far out as a four-year-old could possibly walk alone without finding any positive trace of the boy.

In the posse was the lad's father, Elmer Beebe, a mill worker. The child was given the name of Maxwell when his mother, Mrs. Wayne Maxwell, remarried.

The freckled-faced, red-haired youngster was last seen by a neighbor near the edge of town at 5:30 p. m. Sunday. Footprints believed to be those of the boy were traced for a distance east of town.

A wide-scale search was started Monday morning but a Doberman pinscher dog belonging to Policeman Jack Linkenbach was unable to pick up a scent.

Sonny's mother remained hopeful and recalled the case of Bruce Crozier, 7, who wandered from the hunting camp of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Crozier of Winslow, Ariz., Oct. 26, in rugged country, and was found six days later, unharmed but near exhaustion.

Police of eight states today sought two "handkerchief bandits" who held up Olin L. Currier of Marblehead and a girl companion on a road between Marblehead and Swampscott and escaped in Currier's automobile.

The gunmen appeared alongside Currier's parked car. Currier's girl companion screamed, but her cries went unheard on Market rd.

"Come on! Get them up!" was the command.

Currier and the girl were forced to alight from the car and at pistol point were herded into a nearby field.

"Lie down! Now stay there until we come back—we'll be back soon."

The bandits then drove off in Currier's car. Currier and the girl walked a quarter of a mile to the nearest telephone through which they notified Capt. Thomas Sweet of the Marblehead police.

Police said neither Currier nor his companion reported in person at the police station. Currier, a clerk in a Lynn office, police said, took his companion home and then went to his own home in Rockaway ave., Marblehead. He lives there with his mother and sister.

Army Recruits Pick Hawaii

New Englanders who join the army want to be sent as far away as possible, chiefly Hawaii, then the Philippines and to Panama, First Corps Area headquarters disclosed at the Army Base today.

Most of the recruits seek technical or mechanical training with the air corps, signal corps, motor transport and the new mechanized cavalry and artillery.

N. E. Exposition To Open Monday

The New England States Fair and Exposition will open at Mechanics Building on Monday, Nov. 27, and continue through Sunday, Dec. 3, it was announced today. The automobile show, which includes a demonstration by an $8000 display of the hydramatic drive, and "The Bride's Cottage," a complete building erected inside the hall, are the outstanding features of the exposition.

62 FACING COURT IN RAID HERE

Facing arraignment in municipal court today were 62 men arrested in one of the most spectacular gambling raids in the city's history. They were charged with being present where gambling implements were found.

Police, acting on a tip sent direct to Police Commissioner Timilty, nabbed the men in an alleged betting room on the third floor of a building on Tremont st. near Berkeley.

The place, less than a block from Station 4, was raided by a squad of more than 30 police officers and patrolmen, headed by Supt. Edward Fallon and Capt. Edward J. Keating.

Two barricaded doors were broken down to get into the Tremont Associates and the Moreland Club, which are adjoining, and in the wild scramble that succeeded the blows on the entrance, the leaders escaped down a rear stairway, taking most of the slips with them.

Enough were swept off tables by the raiding officers to show that horse and number slips were played, and several decks of cards and dice cubes were also picked up. The clubs are on the third floor of the building.

Dies Uncovers Red Teachings in Schools

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (INS)—The Dies committee has uncovered alleged evidence purporting to show that Communist authors have written American school textbooks under assumed names, for the purpose of implanting propaganda in the minds of students, it was disclosed today.

The evidence is expected to be made public in December in a series of committee hearings dealing with Communist propaganda and activities in American schools and colleges.

Some of the leading educators of the nation have been invited to appear before the committee. Among those expected to be called is Prof. John Dewey, a Liberal, who is said to have fought Communist inroads in organizations of professors and teachers.

Committee agents have completed an analysis of textbooks used in many universities and schools in various parts of the country. Subtle propaganda has been introduced in many of them, the agents asserted.

Much of the propaganda, they said, is traceable to known Communist writers. One agent stated that "five or six big Communist writers have even written under false names."

EAST IS WEST—Miss Helen Jung, 19, has been selected as Philadelphia's "glamour girl" of the Chinese section.

45,000 Hit by School Closing

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 22 (INS)—Tomorrow is just Thanksgiving to some folks, but to 45,000 Toledo school children it marks the start of a six-week—and possibly longer—unexpected vacation.

For at the close of classes today, Toledo's public schools, faced with a $600,000 deficit, will shut their doors, and even the most conscientious pupil won't be able to absorb one bit of knowledge under a teacher's guidance until after Jan. 1. The closing will not affect 18,000 parochial school pupils.

Teachers have been asked to take over small groups of students in private classes, for which the parents are willing to pay.

The teachers had to refuse the offers under board of education regulations, although they probably could use the money. They are still 12 per cent under their regular salary base and face six weeks without pay.

NORTON RAPS WPA LAY-OFFS

A plea that there be immediate suspension of WPA layoffs in Boston and that those already made jobless by the system of indefinite furloughs after 18 months' employment be restored to payrolls was wired President Roosevelt today by School Committee member Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park.

His telegram to President Roosevelt read in part:

"Black, bitter Winter, with its attendant hardship, has come to Boston again. Thousands of men, women and little children, thrown back on welfare rolls because of WPA layoffs, are the chief sufferers."

Tomorrow Washington officials don't sit down to Thanksgiving dinners. To them, undoubtedly, the day will be one of Thanksgiving for their personal successes.

To Boston's poor and unemployed the day will be one of sadness and privation, chiefly because of the callous disregard of their welfare.

"I respectfully suggest that your own Thanksgiving Day would be a much happier one if you compelled those favored ones to give immediate thought to their less fortunate fellow citizens and postpone further WPA layoffs to May 1, while at the same time restoring to employment those now jobless."

Snow Halts Air Traffic

A snowstorm which meteorologists had said would follow Monday night's spectacular "ring around the moon" hit Boston today, halting airplane traffic because of the low ceiling and slowing up travel on land and sea.

Commuter trains were late, automobiles skidded and there were many minor crashes as Boston came to work today. Light snow had fallen throughout the state. Sanding crews went to work for the first time and winter definitely had arrived.

The weather bureau said the snow may turn to rain before the day is out. Storm warnings were posted all along the New England coast.

The storm was expected to bring northeast gales along the New England coast, to be followed by clearing tomorrow.

U. S. to Loan 57 Cents Per Bushel on Corn

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Secretary Wallace announced today the government would make loans to farmers on surplus 1939-grown corn at the base rate of 57 cents a bushel.

Eligible for loans at this rate will be farmers in the midwestern commercial corn belt who did not plant in excess of this year's agricultural adjustment administration corn acreage allotments. The rate is the same as that provided in a similar loan program last year.

MAY QUIZ BLONDE IN KUHN CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—Fritz Kuhn faced cross-examination today in his defense that $107 was missing from his desk on the German American bank, which practices the tenet of the Dict. Aff. (Hans) E. Dewey ruled the office of the bank. Kuhn's defense was that the money was missing from his office and that he had not seen it since. Kuhn's testimony, that $107 in cash was missing from his office after the raid by Dewey's men was given during his surprise appearance on the witness stand.

He said he had camp and about the disappearance of the money to the district attorney's office without directly accusing a suspect, but had obtained no satisfaction. The amount he said was missing was slightly more than the amount the prosecution now charges he stole from the bank—$189.

The indictments against Kuhn were based on the financial records seized by Dewey's agents.

A claim witness after preliminary testimony, the stout, bespectacled bank leader, testified he was authorized to distribute his organization's funds as he chose, vehemently denied he had stolen any, and declared that the bank owed him $999 in back salary and expenses.

Kuhn flushed when asked by his attorney, Peter L. F. Sabatino, if he had advanced money to Mrs. Camp out of the bank treasury. The bank leader, who is married and has a family, said he had not. He testified he had loaned the money to a woman, but he had not seen her since. He said he had not seen her since he had loaned her the money.

BRITAIN WRECKS NAZI SHIP

LONDON, Nov. 22 (INS)—Sheila from a British warship set afire and wrecked the 4110 ton Hamburg freighter Bertha Fisser on the coast of Iceland, a Reuters dispatch from Reykjavik said today.

The message differed from the British admiralty's announcement, which asserted the German crew started to sink the Bertha Fisser, then took to lifeboats and were picked up by the warship.

Witnesses ashore were quoted by Reuters as saying the warship fired four warning shots, but the German ship refused to stop.

Immediately the warship turned its guns directly upon the merchantman, the witnesses said. After 14 shots, the vessel burst into flames and went aground on the rocks lying close offshore. During the night she split in two.

Windows in the village of Hofn and Farms six miles inland were shattered by the shelling, said Reuters.

Japs to Act In Sinking

TOKYO, Nov. 22 (INS)—Japan was aroused today by the sinking of the 11,930-ton Japanese liner Terukuni Maru in the mine-infested waters off the English coast.

A foreign office spokesman said that government was "gravely concerned" over the loss of the ship and was awaiting proof of ownership of the mine responsible for sending it to the bottom.

"The government will take appropriate steps when full circumstances of the disaster are established," the spokesman added.

It was learned that Japan will so claim indemnity. Japanese underwriters are paying 5,000,000 yen to cover loss of the vessel.

Officials declared Japanese ships would not cease making trips to Europe as a result of the disaster.

Britain Shakes Up Army Council

LONDON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Great Britain revamped her army council today in a shakeup in which only War Minister Leslie Hore-Beelish, president of the council, and Sir Victor Warrender retained their posts.

Named as new members of the council were Viscount Cobham, who will serve as vice-president; Gen. Sir William Ironside, Gen. Sir Robert Gordon-Finlayson, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Walter Vennart and Sir Percy Grigg.

Nazis Confiscate Polish Properties

BRITAIN KEEPS EYE ON INDIA

LONDON, Nov. 22 (INS)—The British government has adopted a policy of "watchful waiting" regarding the crisis over Nationalist demands for Indian self-rule, it was learned today.

This policy was deemed best by officials of the India office pending the publication of the decisions being made at the present session of the executive committee of the All India National Congress, India's most powerful political party.

With Mohandas K. Gandhi present, the committee met for the second time this week at Wardha, residence of the famed Indian leader, to discuss new steps for furnishing the congress' campaign for self-rule.

According to the India office in London, the government is planning no further announcements of policy until it knows the scope and direction of the congress' movement for non-cooperation with British officials in India, recently announced by Gandhi.

As a result of the non-cooperation campaign, the native ministers of eight Indian provinces have resigned.

A DNEP, official German news agency dispatch from Moscow, reported that most northwestern tribes in India are in a state of open rebellion. British punitive expeditions, the dispatch added, have been unable to prevent rebels from harassing road traffic, blowing up bridges and ambushing British troops.

Ex-Nazi Leader Denies Part In Bomb Plot; Boasts of Power

By KENNETH T. DOWNS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Nov. 22 (INS) Otto Strasser, exiled former Nazi leader named by the German government as "spiritual author" of the Munich bomb plot, today disclaimed personal responsibility for the conspiracy but declared that his "Black Front" movement had spread even to the ranks of the German army on the western front.

Strasser said he did not know Georg Elser, the German citizen who confessed setting the time bomb in the Burgerbraukeller in Munich, allegedly at the instigation of "foreign agents."

DOESN'T FEAR GESTAPO

He said also that he was unacquainted with the Mr. Best and Capt. Stevens, the two purported British agents taken into custody by the Nazi Gestapo the morning after the assassination attempt.

"I assure you," Strasser said, "that I do not know Elser. He is not one of my men."

"I never heard of him before, nor did I ever hear of Mr. Best or Capt. Stevens."

"If the Gestapo has found fit to accuse the 'black front' of the Munich attempt, this only serves to prove our strength. The Gestapo, by this accusation, recognizes that our organization is active within the Reich."

"German has been obliged to undertake a 'grand operation' against our forces within Germany. Of the Gestapo we have no fear."

FOILED DEATH PLOTS

"I can assure you that we have our own men within the ranks of the National Socialist party itself. Each of our sections is working steadily. We are represented even in every regiment at the front. That organization has tried many times to assassinate me. But they have always failed."

"Thanks to my friends within its ranks."

Strasser is the brother of Gregor Strasser, one of Hitler's earliest associates, who was "liquidated" in the Nazi blood purge of 1934.

Hitler in Purge Of Internal Foes

Venlo, Holland, the morning after the assassination effort.

Their arrest followed a searching examination by German agents of what was described as a carefully organized anti-German organization operated by the British Intelligence Service at The Hague.

These German operatives, it was said, planted "false information" in London which eventually led to arrest of the two alleged conspirators.

Their apprehension, Berlin quarters declared, marked a "catastrophe of the first rank" for the British intelligence service. Information of inestimable value regarding operations of the British secret service was uncovered in the course of the investigation at The Hague, it was said.

IERED BY EXPORT BAN

Local interest in Elser's arrest overshadowed all international developments in Berlin, although official quarters expressed keen indignation over Great Britain's announced intention of seizing German exports in retaliation for alleged "indiscriminate" mine-laying, which the Germans have repudiated.

"This is an impudent and carefully prepared pretext for the launching of new British acts of piracy," a spokesman said. "It is designed to strike at neutral nations and compel them to bow to the British blockade under a shield of morality."

"Germany will know how to answer."

Nazi officers insisted that Elser's arrest was merely the first step in their campaign to root out all foreign inspiration and agitation against the government.

Heinrich Himmler, chief of the German Gestapo, secret police, charged the plot had been organized by Strasser and financed by the British secret service.

(In London the British foreign office issued a statement flatly denying German allegations that a British agent was responsible for perpetrating the Munich bomb plot.)

That the investigation will be carried much further was indicated when Himmler broadcast a request for more information concerning Elser, who lived at Munich.

Another official announcement said that the "central office of the British intelligence office for Western Europe at The Hague has been active for a long time, instigating plots in Germany, organizing assaults or taking up connections with revolutionary organizations which it assumed existed."

"SPIRITUAL author" of the Munich bombing which nearly cost life of Adolf Hitler is Otto Strasser, leader of anti-Hitler movement abroad, according to Nazi charges.

Boy Dies Watching Dad Pluck Turkey

MIDLAND, Pa., Nov. 22 (INS)—Two-year-old Anthony Dapellina was fatally scalded last night in a tub of boiling water that had been heated to dress the Dapellina family's Thanksgiving Day turkey.

The boy and his six brothers had gathered in the kitchen to watch their father clean the turkey which lay tied on the kitchen floor. Suddenly the bird fluttered and little Anthony, badly frightened, stumbled backward into the water.

NAZIS LOSE PLANE IN SCOUT FLIGHT

BERLIN, Nov. 22 (AP)—Reconnaissance flights over England yesterday cost Germany one plane, DNE, official German news agency, stated today, while the German navy was reported to have sunk an unspecified number of ships in the North sea.

The agency said one German plane had "not returned" from the flights which yielded "elucidating photographs."

(British sources in London reported shooting down a Nazi plane yesterday.)

German artillery dispersed advancing enemy infantry on the western front north of Grindorf and six miles south of Merzig, DNE said. The agency said the French had advanced their positions on French soil to the southern edge of the forest south of the road between Kitzing and Mandern.

French artillery of all calibres was again reported active in the Peril sector near the Luxembourg, French and German borders.

A French communique reported last night that two German planes had been shot down in flames during the day behind their own lines while another Nazi plane was downed in French territory. A British report said one German plane was brought down yesterday on the English coast.

War Back in Routine On Western Front

PARIS, Nov. 22 (AP)—The waiting war on the western front settled back into routine, the French high command indicated today.

Its terse communique said, "Nothing important to report during the night."

Last night's communique reported destruction of three German planes without loss to the French airmen and said, "the day has been notable for an artillery duel to the east of the Saar; also east of the Vogeses."

France Also to Seize German Exports

PARIS, Nov. 22 (AP)—France has decided to take measures similar to those of Britain to cut off German exports in retaliation for the German campaign on the seas, it was announced officially today. It was stated that close co-operation between the two Allies in this field was planned.

Mystery Woman Enters Dowd Case

Bank executive, and two officers made their examination of the contents of a table in the bank's vault compartment, after the expert A. Drickson had drilled it open. A careful memorandum of the contents was made and then the papers and records were returned to the box. N. Y. PATROLMAN QUIZZED McGunigle then hurried back to the district attorney's office to make his report. The New York patrolman and six other men appeared before the grand jury today. Charles A. Hussey, who has already confessed to soliciting gratuities and turning them over to the missing sheriff was the first witness. Deputy Sheriff Daniel A. Whelton, Carlton Bell, of the New England Telephone Company legal department, Charles Virgin, assistant cashier at a downtown bank, John Winston, one of the county employees discharged by Dowd after he took office and Patrick Norton, courthouse foreman followed.

MYSTERY WOMAN FIGURES

Although Doyle refused to comment on Bell's testimony, it was reported that the district attorney's investigators sought information concerning certain telephone calls made by Dowd.

It was believed possible that telephone calls to the New York mystery woman may have been discovered.

The bank official was questioned by Doyle as to Dowd's bank accounts and dates on which certain large deposits were made. The district attorney's office has had a careful survey made of all known bank transactions in which Dowd figured.

Also to be presented to the grand jury was a copy of Dowd's statement made on the day of his resignation.

At that time he stated that he lacked funds with which to carry on a fight to prove his innocence.

SEARCH PUSHED He charged he was a victim of persecution by the Boston Bar Association. When found dazed in New York he carried the $6625 already mentioned.

A relative of Dowd's, the man reported to have tried to cash a $4000 check for Dowd, Monday will also go before the jury, Doyle announced.

Meanwhile the hunt for Dowd, which started with his indictment yesterday, continued. Police were watching homes of relatives, particularly the one he visited Monday. All persons have been warned that by hiding Dowd they are liable to prosecution.

Dowd's friends have told investigators that they had expected him to surrender immediately, but that from day to day the fugitive had changed his mind. None of them could tell his present whereabouts.

ADMIRAL LAND LEFT WITH 'BAG'

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
Special to the Boston Evening America

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—It is said to see a fine old sea dog like Admiral Land left holding the bag by the politicians, but such things do happen in a democracy, where the politicians always have to be thinking about votes.

This writer hasn't the slightest doubt that Admiral Land, finely disciplined navy officer, had high-up authority for the original decision of the Maritime Commission to permit the transfer of some eight United States Line ships to Panama registry.

Then two embarrassing things happened—while the President at Hyde Park was saying that the transfer of the ships wouldn't be a violation of the spirit of the new "neutrality" law, Mr. Hull in Washington was doing a graceful back-somersault, and saying it would be.

Also the politicians—even the New Deal politicians—were screaming that the whole thing was a trick.

Now, Cordell Hull loves his job as the American premier. Remember what he swallowed at the London conference?

Probably no other American Secretary of State culped down such a dose and liked it for the job's sake.

If Mr. Roosevelt had repudiated the Secretary of State on the Panama transfer issue maybe Cordell would have resigned—and maybe he wouldn't.

But one thing was and still is certain—the transfer of registry would have raised the cry of trickery into a veritable tornado of sound.

Before the storm of protests the President altered his mind—for the present, at least.

Why was this?

It was because the New Deal has achieved an unenviable record for doing the smart, clever and tricky thing.

Our lawmakers are constantly discovering in laws they helped to enact trick clauses they didn't know were there.

Woman Kills Charging Wild Boar With Bow and Arrow

TELLICO PLAINS, Tenn., Nov. 22 (AP).—Mrs. E. M. McNish, only woman in a party of 11, hunting wild Russian boars with bows and arrows at Cherokee National Forest, drove a steel-tipped arrow through a 200-pound tusker today—the largest to be killed this season.

Mrs. McNish sank three arrows into the animal before he gave up a battle in which he seriously wounded one of the dogs. The boar was a perfect specimen of the breed brought to the forest from the Ural mountains, said Earl Shaub of the State Conservation Department.

Mrs. McNish was with her husband when they spotted the boar. She got within 20 yards before shooting the first arrow which caused the tusker, maddened by the wound, to race around in a circle. Two other arrows were shot from closer range.

A professional nurse, Mrs. McNish treated the wounded dog before returning to their camp in the forest.

CAFETERIA SOCIETY N.Y. LATEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—Gotham got a glimpse last night of a brand new type of night life—cafeteria society—at the opening of "the world's first and only" self-service night club. It combined the best features of an automaton and a jitterbug rendezvous.

The idea was Richard M. Decker's, a veteran of 30 years in the restaurant business, who calls his place the Fiesta Danceteria. It's located at Broadway and 42d st. There wasn't a pair of tails or a tuxedo to be seen, and the strongest drink served was beer. But everybody had a good time for 60 cents.

REAL "COVER CHARGE"
 That was the cover charge which covered everything provided you weren't too hungry and your thirst just ordinary.

For that sum the first nighter got his choice of hors d'oeuvres from a smorgasbord layout that raved any of the city's Swedish restaurants. Beer was extra, at 10 cents a glass, but there was soup, pot and milk for those who preferred it.

Heavy eaters could select from a cafeteria steam table for an additional charge.

A white-jacketed bus-boy carried your tray to a table from which you had a ring-side view of the dance floor where Broadway jitterbugs put on a show as entertaining as Billy Rose's diamond horseshoe.

THINGS GET CHUMMY
 Furnishings and decorations were not subtle, but colorful. The walls were dotted in vivid murals which, after four beers, could have passed for something by Dali.

But there was more to come. It turned out that the cafeteria dance floor was no the only attraction in his remarkable departure from the usual hot spot. Up a carpeted stairway was a dimly lighted ballroom where the strains from a dance orchestra blended with the tinkle of glasses from another beer-bar.

It might have been the beer, or just the cozy atmosphere, but things got real chummy here. This customer's young lady companion had three invitations to dance in two minutes.

Co-Eds Marooned In Sorority House

MERIDALE, Mont., Nov. 22 (INS)—The glamour girls of Delta Gamma Sorority today pursued without noticeable enthusiasm domestic science courses not included in the curriculum of Montana State University.

While one of their number, Miss Katherine Kelly of Anaconda, was in a hospital suffering from an illness tentatively diagnosed as encephalitis, her sisters suffered from "cabin fever" as a result of the quarantine claimed on the Sorority house by city health officials. The maids fled and the girls were forced to do their own cooking.

GERMANS AT DAWN

by
PAUL WHELAN

IN the air there was a night chill of early autumn but the two boys, cautiously working at the earth, were not chilly. They were warm, not alone from their physical exertions but from the excitement of this moment and from the danger that hung over them.

They were working stealthily, digging like moles at the earth, drawing up each handful of soil carefully, depositing it just as carefully to one side.

But suddenly an incautious foot snapped a twig, and the crack of the weather-dried wood sounded to them, in the stillness of the night, as loud as a pistol shot.

"Wer da?"

The cry rang out from the darkness and the boys listened themselves to the ground, endeavoring to press themselves in. Abruptly the finger of a searchlight shot through the darkness and the searching finger loved the night.

Men were running even as the glinting light fell upon the pair lying prostrate. They scrambled quickly to their feet for flight, and one of the boys drew back his arm and buried a small package far across the electrically-charged wire fence into Holland.

Then the German soldiers were upon them and one had thrust a bayonet savagely through the thigh of Raymond Desain, who was 18.

But what was worse — Leon Trulin, also 18, saw out of quick darting eyes that one of the Boche had crossed the border into Holland and was picking up spy reports the youth had hoped to lose.

And so, in the night of Oct. 3, 1915, the boy spy ring of Lille was shattered completely, and little more than a month later Leon Trulin would face a German firing squad at dawn and become the youngest spy executed during the World War.

Many spies there were for the Allies in that war, but none was braver or more determined to be of service than Leon Trulin, known to British special branch as Leon 143 and Leon Turpin.

Four years before the start of the war, his widowed mother had moved to Lille, in Northern France, from Ath, in Belgium, with her nine young children.

Leon was only 17 when the war began, an eager-eyed, tow-headed Belgian youth fired by the thunder of the guns, night and day, and excited, as were all the youngsters of Lille, by the turmoil of the war which was at the town's very doorstep.

As the eldest of the children, however, Leon had argued vainly with his mother for permission to enlist, even after the grey-clad German hordes had begun to occupy the territory following the bloody march through Belgium.

The British lines lay but a short distance away, part of a suburb of Lille was in ruins from British shells which overshoot the marks of military objectives in the occupied town.

Even an amateur spy had no difficulty in knowing some of German activities in Lille itself. From here troops were distributed and wounded were evacuated. Ammunition and supply dumps were in the open, several German aviation fields had been set up and heavy Boche batteries dotted the area.

However, the region abounded with German counter-espionage agents and every precaution was taken to keep the inhabitants in check.

Each three days the mayor was required to hand over five hostages to the Germans, to become victims in the event of hostile acts; the community had been forced to pay over $300,000 francs when the Boche arrived.

All persons were required to remain indoors between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m., under pain of being shot. Special permissions to travel must be obtained for trips to another town. The Franco-Belgian frontier was heavily patrolled by the Germans.

Leon and his young companions took all these restrictions fairly lightly, however, and for the first month of the war the youngsters gambled about German gun emplacements they discovered, laughed when they were driven off by the guards.

They invaded the aviation fields, where again their youth brought them nothing worse than guttural scoldings as they were chased away. They watched the troop movements by train and they knew every warehouse and depot where the Germans were storing munitions and supplies.

Meanwhile, Leon continued to argue futilely with his mother, and finally one night he took matters into his own hands. He had just turned 18 in June, 1915, when he slipped away, leaving this note, with a little fib:

"Dear Mother: I was detected taking photographs of the trenches. I threw my camera into a ditch. I am being followed. I am leaving to defend my country. May God protect me! Dear Mother, have courage. Burn this paper."

On July 5, with group of refugees, he evaded the German sentries and crossed the electric wire from Belgium into Holland, carrying military information which he had been collecting voluntarily for days as he slipped through the countryside, sleeping in an abandoned ruin here, a damp woods retreat there.

HE made his way to Folkestone, England, where he was dismayed to learn at the Belgian consulate that he could not pass the physical examination and become a soldier.

There was nothing stopping this youth. He went direct from the consulate to the headquarters of Major Cameron, director of British espionage activities ("The White Lady") in Paris. There the youth gave the military information he had collected to one Monthaye, a fellow Belgian attached to the staff.

Monthaye glanced over the information. Much of it the British agents already had sent in, although for the first time, wordings of intelligence in the area had been spotty. What interested Monthaye more was that the Belgian investigation was from Lille, a German concentration point from which Folkestone had been almost cut off, so a stringing was the Boche watch.

"So tell me about Lille," said Monthaye.

The boy launched into a recital. From the storehouse of his youthful mind he described things in Lille as they had been when he left a fortnight before. Quickly Monthaye sprang up, secured a map of the area, and a large scale map of the town itself.

"It is here at one place that the Boche has concentrated shells and ammunition," said the youth, indicating a street upon which a warehouse stood.

Monthaye marked the location, and, quickly then, young Leon charted other storehouses, gun emplacements hidden from the air, aviation fields, the yards where troop trains were shunted until the soldiers were detained, the German control stations.

They were a bit in doubt because of his youth, but they congratulated him finally and accepted him into Special Intelligence. For a week at Folkestone he was put through a course of training, and then he was told that if his idea worked out he would be enrolled as permanent agent.

Plentifully supplied with money, and carrying verbal instructions and the lessons he had learned, the boy started back to Lille to carry out his plan.

It was simple, and through its very simplicity it had every possibility for success, in the eyes of the British espionage chiefs. Leon, mindful of the carelessness with which the Boche guards had shooed away youngsters, planned to organize a ring of boys to pick up information in just such casual fashion—and he would forward it.

LEON TRULIN

It was mid-July by the time Leon finally managed again to reach Lille, but he could not go home because he had rashly written ahead to his mother and he was warned that the letter undoubtedly had been intercepted by a censor.

He went to the home of his closest childhood friend, Desain, in whom he found a ready ally who also wished to serve the cause of his country. They set about recruiting and soon they had a formidable band of restless and mischievous spirits, some 13 years old, some 14, some 15, some 16 none over 18.

IT WAS through a 15-year-old boy and a game of chase, repeated in almost exact procedure at various parts of Lille, that Leon and Raymond were able to make almost perfect plans of fortifications and gun emplacements, with eyes as camera-keen as those of a woman viewing another's dress, taking in every detail even as they were being thrown out.

If the Boche soldiers found an annoying plentitude of youths underfoot, there certainly was no cause for suspicion in that, and some of the Germans, less Prussianized than most, even let the kids play around in places where an adult would have found himself immediately under unpleasant arrest.

Young Trulin amazed the British agents by suddenly popping up again in Folkestone on July 26 with a mass of this information. They chided him for his foolhardiness in thus exposing himself to capture, the while they admired him.

As director, they told him, he should delegate the risky business of carrying reports to a subordinate, but one whom he could trust.

Thereafter, Leon alternated with Camille, a friend residing at Tournai, in carrying the reports either to Holland or to England.

The boys broadened their scope to include watching of trains, maintaining a 24-hour service and furnishing such accurate information, complete even as to designations of divisions and regiments, that the British knew almost every shift of the enemy.

Who could suspect boys of 14 and 15 years, down to the trains come in and go out—like American kids watch the arrival and departure of the circus—who could suspect such kids of spying for Britain?

Members of this young band, with the limited means at their disposal, did their bit as patriotically and as bravely as any soldier in the fighting line.

Often their ruses, their tricks and their camouflage were carried to boyish extremes, but they were successful.

And for more than three months, regularly twice a week, Major Cameron received a report covering everything of military importance occurring in the Lille region.

It was fun for the youthful band, fun and excitement much more heady than the synthetic thrill programs which rasp through radios today at the supper hour for modern youngsters—and then lose the illusion through the inevitable and cloying commercial blurb.

And there was practically all thrill, with little money in it for the boys. In the Belgian consulate at Flushing, after the war, were found a number of the reports made by Leon, and some of the instructions he received from an agent, one Carol. One of these contained the following passages:

"Leon 143 will be paid for his reports on the troops of occupation from 10 to 40 francs, according to the value of the information; a bonus of 100 francs will be allotted to him for the creation of each new train-watching post, to be paid after it has functioned two weeks.

"AN additional bonus of from 25 to 50 francs, according to the importance of the line, will be paid him for each post during the period it functions.

"Train-watchers will receive from 8 to 16 francs per day of 24 hours; as for the couriers, they will be paid 110 francs for each batch of reports if they reach Flushing within two days, 100 francs for three days, and after that 5 per cent less for each day late.

"The payments will be made to Leon 143 on his return to Holland, or to any delegate he may appoint, but only on receipt of the receipts of the reality of us with receipts from his agents for each sum paid them."

Better than anything else, these notes should dispel the idea that Allied agents in occupied territories received large sums of money for their services. True, they also received expense money, but the notes here are purely in the nature of recompense.

Leon was authorized to pay his train-watchers from $160 to $220 per day for 24-hour service, on the basis of five francs to a cent, actually this meant 80 cents to $1, for a train-watcher could not possibly work efficiently more than 12 hours a day.

At any rate, the terms satisfied the boys. They were having a lot of fun at it—and they were serving their country.

Occasionally some officer, sterner than others, would seize some playful youth and detain him for questioning, but in every case the adroit youth's apparent air of innocence and bewilderment and fright dispelled any suspicions that might have been lurking in the Prussian's mind.

Until one day, when he approached too near a gun emplacement for the sentries to disregard, one of the boys was seized and arrested.

When Leon heard of this he had no uneasiness, remembering the other youngsters who had squirmed out of similar circumstances. But this time it was to be different.

On the day following the seizure, Raymond Desain, greatly agitated, came to Leon with dire news. Apparently the youthful captive had not been as adroit as the others.

Raymond's sister, he said, was at home when members of the German Secret Police called and questioned his mother, about Leon. The kid sister, realizing the import of this, had slipped out of the house, located her brother and told him,

Raymond had come directly to Leon.

Young as they were, Leon and Raymond knew there was only one thing to do—take flight, and as rapidly as possible. They detailed a boy to contact all the others and tell them the game was over. Then the two friends set out for the Dutch frontier—their only chance of escaping German vengeance.

Perhaps if Leon had not insisted on carrying the last batch of reports with him, things might have resulted differently. Apparently the captured boy had been broken down and had named the leaders, but at the worst it might have been Leon's word against the word of the boy.

CARRY THE reports Leon did, for the border and the haven it offered, once they were across. Leon knew the way and, traveling mostly by night and hiding by day, they evaded the electric wire barrier just north of Antwerp on the night of Oct. 8.

They were stealthily digging their way under the electric fence—which at that time had no wires buried beneath the surface—when they were discovered in the glare of a searchlight.

It made no difference that Leon had hurled the final reports over the fence into Holland. No respecters of neutrality were the Germans, and at a later date, members of the German Secret Police were to cross to Dutch soil and arrest Leon, Fauquet and Creusen.

The two prisoners were taken to the camp of the border guards for the night, and in the morning were removed to Antwerp and the Prison des Beguines.

Eight days later, on October 12, 1915, they were transferred to Lille and were surprised to find others of the youthful band already in prison. Prussianism had extracted from the first youth arrested all the information he had regarding the identity of others in the group.

Less than a month after their return to Lille, a court martial, on November 7, condemned the two boys to death after he had been found guilty.

There were lesser charges against Raymond Desain and four others, all under 18 but all found guilty of the same charges brought against them.

Desain was sentenced to life imprisonment. Such was his subsequent treatment at the hands of the Boche, who had been incarcerated for more than three years, that he died in late November, 1918, in Strasbourg, while stumbling back toward home and home where his parents waited.

A third youth also was condemned to hard labor for life, although his was but 15 years and he was released when Germany lost the war.

Three more were sentenced to 15 years each at hard labor, Germany not knowing then that the hardest labor would be her own, and that the fruits of her labor would be defeat.

The boy who had betrayed them, a youth named Marcel—was freed by the Boche.

IN his cell the night before he died, Leon wrote, with firm hand, his last report—one on himself. In it he said:

"I am dying for my country without regret. I grieve for my dear mother, my sisters and my brothers, who are suffering for what they are not to blame. I forgive the Boche. I did my duty, but they have been very hard on me.

"Dear mother, I hope you will forgive me before I die. I shall face death without weakening."

Nor did he weaken. In the dawn of Nov. 8, 1915, he calmly and bravely declined the use of a bandage for his eyes as he placed his back against a tree trunk in the Citadel of Lille.

He did not flinch as the guns of the firing squad came to aim. There was none braver ever to look in those black muzzles.

FOREIGN LECTURERS in the United States, it is refreshing to learn, are not all propagandists for war.

Dr. Edvard Hambro, son of the president of the Norwegian Parliament, who is on a private lecture tour of this country, gave San Francisco interviewers excellent advice for Americans.

"America's trouble," he said, "is dividing the world into good boys and bad boys, and getting mad at the bad boys."

"In Norway, we have learned that even the good boys are frightfully bad when they get a chance—and WE TRUST NONE OF THEM."

With obvious reference to the dangerous emotionalism that creates so much of our risk of involvement in foreign war through meddling in foreign affairs, he said pointedly:

"Norway is geographically closer to war than you, but also MUCH COOLER."

"Norway, to a man, is neutral and will remain neutral; but America will stay out only if it STOPS ITS DEFEATIST BELIEF IN THE INEVITABILITY OF JOINING."

WE COULD GET into the European war with amazing ease and swiftness, simply by making one European cause or another our cause—in short, by continuing to meddle in European affairs very much as we have done and are doing.

The disposition of some of our thoughtless people, and particularly of some of our careless politicians, to pick so-called "bad boys" in Europe to hate, and so-called "good boys" to help, is as he well says OUR TROUBLE.

In Norway they have learned through close contact and long experience that "even the good boys are frightfully bad when they get a chance."

Undoubtedly, the people of Norway know as well as we what is going on in Europe, and also have opinions and sympathies.

Norway is certainly closer to the war than we are. There is no reason why Norway should be cooler and SANER than we are about it.

THE SAME WISE COURSE that keeps Norway out of war should be our course.

The same concentration on non-intervention and non-meddling that keeps the peace for Norway will keep the peace for us.

We have no cause for war. We do not want war. We cannot afford war.

Why should we let our minds be poisoned by vicious foreign propaganda linking our peaceful purposes with the historically warlike and embittered destinies of Europe?

Why should we let our national will for peace be weakened by fallacious insistence that we cannot keep out of war however much we want to?

Of course we can keep out of war.

We would commit a GREAT CRIME against our American institutions, our American ideals and our American destinies by getting into war.

We would at least suspend all liberty in the United States by doing so.

We might LOSE IT FOREVER.

Our American business is to KEEP AMERICA AT PEACE.

Let us MIND our American business.

IN A CHAOTIC WORLD an outstanding Bostonian rightly uses his important office to champion respect for law and order. He is United States Attorney Edmund J. Brandon.

Speaking against leniency for a man who had pleaded guilty to a charge of assault upon an officer of the Federal Government, Mr. Brandon a few days ago said:

"The action of the defendant was an action which struck at the authority of the courts of the United States of America. It was a gesture against organized lawful authority."

"It was one of those acts that in so many parts of the world have been used to express a disrespect and contempt, if you will, for lawful authority which has resulted in the type of chaos which we see in the world today."

That is straight-forward, sound AMERICAN law, enunciated with a forceful clarity that distinguishes Mr. Brandon as a worthy member of the school of legal thinking which both honors and practices the uncompromising idealism of the great Chief Justice John Marshall.

March of Events -1- By BENJAMIN DeCASSERES

ALFRED DUFF COOPER, former First Lord of the British Admiralty, who with Mrs. Cooper, the former Lady Diana Manners, is now in the United States, denounces a new German "hate" song which carries the refrain, "Today we own Germany; tomorrow the whole world!"

Really, Mr. Cooper ought to study his own nation's favorite air, "Rule, Britannia," which contains this stanza:

"Wider yet and wider
Shall thy bounds be set,
God who made thee mighty
Make thee mightier yet!"

"They" and "Thee" are England. Maybe it is from "Rule, Britannia, Rule the Waves!" that Germany imbibed the passion for "going places."

"I KNOW very well the defects of the woman I loved. I do not idealize her or experience any illusions. I remember nothing so poignantly as the sufferings I have endured, unless it is those I have, even innocently, inflicted. There can rarely have been any one who has known much better or more variously than I have the beauty of the world and absorbed it more eagerly, the beauty of nature, or art, or human character and impulse. The memory of the torture remains. I could almost echo the words of Ninon de Lenclos: 'If I had known what my life was to be I would have killed myself.' 'I see life whole, coldly, nakedly, all around, and though I am glad it is over,

ALFRED DUFF COOPER AND CHARMING WIFE
He "Ought to Study His Own Nation's Favorite Air"

though I would not live it again, yet, now that I seem to view it whole, I view it with joy, even with ecstasy."

Such is the extraordinary, the contradictory ending to Havelock Ellis' "My Life," published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

It is the autobiography of a liberator, a pattern of the civilized man, who died recently at 80. It is a love-story in the "modern manner," proving that real love is just love and never alters.

But when Ellis says he would not live his life over again, I doubt him. Almost all of us say that, but we do not mean it. If some one were to knock on our graves and shout "get up!" nine hundred and ninety-nine thousand out of a million of us would leap to our feet with joy.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Woodman, of Geneseo, Ill., with two lower front teeth.

Old King Richard the Third of "My Horse, My Horse, My Kingdom for a Horse" fame had little Woodman beaten to a frazzle.

Royal Richard was born with a full head of hair and a full set of teeth.

There is, however, no reason why teeth and hair shouldn't grow before we are born.

Robinson Jeffers, the California poet, once told me while we were strolling over Point Lobos that a child had been born in a shack around there that emitted fire and smoke from its mouth when it was born.

Could this have been the original Ham-and-Egg revolutionary spouter?

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—The ceremonies at the laying of the cornerstone were very simple and very nice. Both Mr. MacLeish, the Librarian of Congress, and Mr. Connor, the architect, spoke very delightfully. Except for the fact that the people outside had a very cold time, the laying of the cornerstone went off without a hitch.

Before the ceremonies, many people came into the house to shake hands with the President and have a word with him. Just as everyone was leaving the house, I heard a crash and discovered that one of the card tables, around which some people were sitting, had collapsed and all the china had fallen to the floor!

It was too bad to break the china, but I had to laugh, remembering the table which collapsed when the King and Queen were with us. We must have something collapse apparently when we are having parties! Much less china, however, was broken on this occasion.

THE RECTOR, Mr. Wilson, and his wife and little boys were with us for lunch. I was amused to have the one sitting beside me finish everything that he had to eat and then, having eaten a goodly portion of ice cream and cake, turn to me and say: "May-

ARCHIBALD MacLEISH
"Spoke Very Delightfully"

I eat some of the crackers?"

A dish of crackers was on the table, destined for those who had begun their meal with chowder. The small boy had scorned that, but after everything else was over, I imagine he felt he must fill up with these, the only things left to attract his attention.

At tea time, a bust of the President, done by a French artist who had never seen him, was presented by Mrs. Cramer, who had bought it after it had been exhibited in the French Pavilion at the World's Fair. It will go into the new library.

Mr. Binings, the artist who is doing the decorations for the Wappingers Falls, New York, postoffice, came to tell the President about some of his ideas for the painting. He brought an old painting, which I thought quite fascinating, showing the mills about the creek where Wappingers Falls was really an active industrial spot. These "old" paintings may not be remarkable as art, but they certainly are interesting.

BERNARD KOHN, who had been making a clock for the past six years, for the President, came with his son to present it. It is a double timepiece which registers both Pacific and Eastern Standard Time. I shall be able to look at it and know just what time it is in Seattle and Los Angeles.

This will probably be a relief to my children there, whom I might call at untimely hours. The President occasionally wishes that some of the people who call him up from Europe would remember the difference in time in this country.

We came down last night to Washington on the night train and found a gray and chilly day, down here with most of the leaves blown off the trees. This is a particularly full day with very little time to sit and think about world affairs, which give one a sense of depression in any case.

Broadway Medley MAYOR WON'T VIE WITH LION

By Leonard Lyons

Mayor LaGuardia

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—"For our 'New York Films, Inc.," George Jessel relates at Moore's, "Ben Hecht and I wanted to use a production trademark, like MGM's growing lion—substituting a picture of LaGuardia, growing. But the Mayor refused to permit it." "Because of the war developments," a Washington official informs at the Labor Club, "The Democratic party leaders are seriously discussing postponing the national convention from June until September. They have their party organizations, and don't need a long campaign." "Jock Whitney is set to enter a new field of enterprise," a sports promoter reports at Sardi's. "He may buy the Pittsburgh pro football team." "The Hakim Brothers, whose French films have won so many prizes, will produce movies in New York, and have purchased Stefan Zweig's version of 'Volpone,'" a director states at the International Casino. "They're negotiating for Charles Laughton, John Barrymore or Edward G. Robinson."

"FRED ASTAIRE," a producer states at Leon and Eddie's, "is being talked of, to take over the George M. Cohan role in the Sidney Howard show." "Despite the kidding Muni received, when, in the Zola picture, he was billed as 'Mr. Paul Muni,'" a Warner executive assures at the Melody Bar, "he'll get that 'Mr.' billing again, in 'We Are Not Alone.'" "One of the most famous young band leaders in America is dissolving his orchestra," an agent informs at the Tavern. "He hasn't appeared with them, during their current engagement, for the past six days."

"THE DEMARCOS have been signed for a show," a dancer reports at the Marlentine. "They'll appear in the new Jack Haley show, which Eddie Davis and Matt Brooke are writing." "Jimmy Walker really may accept a vaudeville offer," a Paramount executive informs at the Rainbow Room. "He and Jessel together may do a week at the Paramount Theater here."

"PAT HURLEY, former Secretary of War, will be offered a top job with one of the most important utility companies in the world," a broker declares at Longchamps. "I'm waiting for a message from Lord Beaverbrook." Dick Merrill confides at Heubens. "If a certain thing happens in London, then he's going to give me time, and I'll join him over there." "Dave whose Elise Room just closed, will reopen at a new spot," a realtor states at the Troc. "He'll resume at the Yacht Club."

PAUL MUNI

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Like the sword of Damocles, the killer-diller weapon used by the Boston Bar Association is said to be poised again—with not much more than a thread keeping it away from the necks of a pair of political figures. . . . The legal bond, successful twice in private prosecutions, has a faction in its ranks which favors withdrawing from further prosecutions. . . . This group advocates turning the job over to District Attorney Foley, with the bar association in the background, but helping with evidence and investigation.

DEBUTANTE PEGGY PARKER will return to the Latin Quarter where she made her professional dancing debut last season for a two weeks engagement beginning December 4. . . . Romo Vincent was given a going-away ovation by a crowd of regular night-clubbers when the rotund comedian finished his Boston stay at the Mayfair. . . . Here is one lad—Joe E. Lewis is another—who can write his own dates and terms for a return engagement. . . . Two weeks ago, the name meant virtually nothing hereabouts. . . . Romo, incidentally, does NOT plan to resume a tour of the country with Constance Bennett. . . . Miss Bennett was talking about reviving the Duncan Sisters' weather-beaten "Topsy and Eva" and planning to have her sister, Joan, appear with her in the title roles. . . . Comedian Vincent probably put a stop to these ambitious plans when he posed this question: "Which one of you, Connie, will play blackface?"

BETTER THAN THE MOTHER-IN-LAW species of gags along Broadway has been the unflinching devotion of Milton Berle's mother to her talented son as a source of material for the wit. . . . Mother Berle never misses a performance of Milton's, and she has been on constant attendance since her boy was a chit of seven. . . . And she has served, unblushingly as a claque, for Milton. . . . In picture houses, nightclubs, private parties and in radio studios, both the applause and laughter for Milton has been led by Mrs. Berle. . . . Well, Milton has taken a broad step forward in the direction of a career in the theater with his appearance, at far below his market value in George Abbott's production, "See My Lawyer," a legitimate comedy. . . . So now, according to Lou Straus, Mrs. Berle is paying tribute to her son's new dignity by applauding with kid gloves.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: The record for attendance (and receipts) is expected to fall at the annual Boston College alumni dinner-dance, scheduled for the Statler's main ballroom on the eve of the Holy Cross game next Friday night. . . . Once called the "Victory Dance," the alumni is taking the predilectional note from the function. . . . Holy Cross should be a 6 or 7 to 5 favorite at game time. . . . Carmine D'Apollito, the shoe-shine boy who has many City Hall customers, issues a rain-check, so to speak, on his shines. . . . When the day is overcast, and shine-spelling rain or snow threaten, the lad gives a ten-hour guarantee against the elements. . . . If the shine is ruined, young Carmine does the job again "for free."

PAULETTE GODDARD
IN NEW THRILLER
By Louella O. Parsons

Paulette Goddard

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22—With "The Cat and the Canary" doing exceptional business all over the country, Arthur Hurdlow wasn't long in getting the idea to reunite Paulette Goddard and Bob Hope in a successor to the chiller-diller. Right after the first of the year Paulette and Bob are set to scare us to death again in Paul Dickey's former stage hit, "The Ghost Breakers," a comedy thriller about a young American who goes to Spain to help a pretty girl chase a ghost out of her castle.

In the fond hope that lightning will strike twice in the same place Paramount is not only lining up the same co-stars, but Elliot Nugent, who directed "The Cat and the Canary" will megaphone the new mystery. Right now Nugent is in New York launching his own stage hit, "The Male Animal" which did very well in its Los Angeles try-out.

ALICE FAYE

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Alice Faye is broken-hearted. Retakes on "Little Old New York" make it impossible for her to fly to New York to join Tony Martin—and she won't be able to go until the Christmas holidays: Ruby Keeler, looking like a little girl in a sailor hat and low shoes, at the Hawaiian Paradise with Tom McAvity; Buster Keaton doing the town with two beauties from Earl Carroll's; Ann and Jack Warner returned to Hollywood after two months in New York and Hot Springs; Orrin Tucker's orchestra is the talk of San Francisco. They won't let Wee Bonnie Baker stop singing "Oh Johnnie"; Laurence Olivier finished "Rebecca" today and gets two weeks at Palm Springs before starting "Draaielen"; Wally Beery and Carol Ann taking the new baby, Phyllis Ann, for a baby buggy ride on a Beverly Hills street; Sidney Guilaroff, the M-G-M hair stylist, being very attentive to Laraine Day at the Tropics; Ray Denanbaum, 20th Century press agent, and Dorothy Jenkins, sketch artists on the same lot, eloped to Wickenburg, Arizona, Sunday and were married; Melvyn Douglas, who hasn't been feeling well, slipping out of Hollywood for a two weeks vacation in New York.

SHIPPED ABOARD the next China Clipper to Honolulu will be a print of "Swanee River" which Darryl Zanuck is sending to Andrea Leeds and Bob Howard for an advance and very private preview. It is more than idle curiosity that prompted the new Mrs. Howard to beg to see her latest film. The newlyweds will make up their minds entirely from the 20th Century-Fox picture, which gives Andrea her biggest screen break to date, whether or not she will continue as a movie actress or retire to raise a family.

DAILY STORY

Granny's Luck

IT WAS UNCANNY, Grandma Hollis' luck. Every one was still talking of a month ago, when her name was called at the Capital, and she had walked, little and neat, to the stage for her check of $350. Ever since then she had the Midas touch. The neighbors watched a refrigerator being delivered to her little home, and Grandma explained, "My grandson, Officer Dan Foster, was selling raffle tickets. I felt lucky and sent for one. He sent this today."

It was the night of the big Zingo game. Top prize was $1000 in cash. Grandma came, knitting bag on her arm.

THE CHURCH CLOCK tolled 10. Grandma came from the crowded hall and looked both ways on the deserted street. She hugged her purse under her arm and quickly started off home. It happened she was a little deaf, so she did not hear the large sedan creep stealthily down the street behind her. She walked up the steps and into the unlighted house. A knock came at the kitchen door as Grandma enjoyed her cup of tea.

Two dark youths crowded in. "All right, old girl," said the one with the twisted eyebrow, "hand it over. We know you left the Zingo ball early because you won."

Grandma said not a word, but after adjusting her glasses for a sharp look at the two went into the next room. Immediately, a tall young man, strangely like Grandma, stepped in—with a gun in his hand. The youths were handcuffed when Grandma entered.

"These are the ones, Dan," said Grandma severely. "These are the wicked boys who snatched my purse five weeks ago. I'd never forget that eyebrow."

"Great work, Grandma," said the young man with the gun. "That lucky plan of yours certainly succeeded. These kids won't continue to take advantage of defenseless women." He made a motion to take his prisoners away, but turned. "By the way, Grandma, how was your luck tonight?"

GRANDMA looked exasperated. "Why, Dan, what a question! You know I've never won a thing in my life; that is, except for the money these rascals took from me. I'm glad you've caught them." Officer Dan grinned and opened the back door.

"Oh, wait a minute," said Grandma, "I want to thank you and the family for sending me that lovely ice-box for my birthday last week." Then, to herself, she added, "Yes, and I must return that blank check to the Capital manager tomorrow."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I STARTED to send a ruthless answer to her letter the other day. Exasperating creature—how she has pestered us all with her desire to be a writer! But she can't be a writer! She hasn't a particle of talent! And she never would stand the drilling if she were given a chance. Yet, year after year, she keeps making her futile attempts sending them around—asking for criticism.

Well, I wouldn't stand it any more. Why should she waste my precious time with her tiresome yammering? I'd tell her the truth—that's what I'd do! Tell her to forget all about her writing, and settle down to her housework like a sensible woman and cook and sew.

Paper in the typewriter, irritated fingers on the keys, I began to type. Then suddenly—as plainly as though his dear scarred hand were laid on mine, as clearly as though his kindly voice spoke above the clatter of the machine—something stopped me. Something called. And across the years and the darkness I heard my father saying, once again: "DO NOT TAKE FROM ANY MAN HIS SONG."

HOW PUZZLED I had been when he first said that to me. What had caused it? Some ten-year-old foolishness. We'd been laughing at the old man next door—the old man with the long white hair and strangely young eyes, who still thought he was fighting Indians, though he hadn't seen a Sioux for half a century.

Giggling—jumping up and down—pointing with childish squeals of derision at the queer old mule-load he carried—until, suddenly the old man's face had seemed to crumble. The light had gone from his eyes. He stood there, looking vaguely around bewildered.

It was then my father, coming upon us, had put his hand on my shoulder—given me that long, deep look of his—said those strange words: "DO NOT TAKE FROM ANY MAN HIS SONG."

I HAD BEEN about to take the woman's song from her. How many times had I taken their own bit of song away from shabby, timid souls? How often had I broken their music by the clamor of my ridicule, my impatience, my disdain? The paper was crumpled on my machine. The little clattering, cruel keys were lost in a blur of tears. Across the distance I saw his dear face fade—heard his voice fail.

But if only heart could remember—always!

Business Spurt On Ship Toll

The war that isn't a war has broken many hearts lost to beguiling "war babies" two months back . . . Golden dreams were shattered by the methodical way the fighters went about their grim business . . . Yet prosaic realities may soon gladden sorrowing speculators . . .

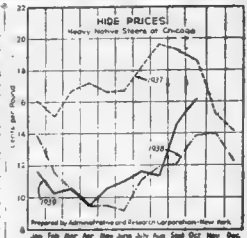

TWO HAPPENINGS . . . Concomitantly appearing in the news columns get scant notice . . . They tell of loss and cost . . . The twins whose appeal largely accounts for the attractiveness of "war babies" . . . Land activity may be small but on sea it is being prosecuted with a thoroughness matching anything the World War offered . . . Daily thousands of tons of shipping are sunk by mines or torpedoes . . . Already Britain has scooped up the largest single lot of scrap metal ever dealt in . . . And informed Wall Street observers are describing the British War Supply Board as the biggest purchasing project in America . . . One likely to disperse between one and two billion dollars for American products . . . The war may not seem real enough for the market but there is little doubt about its costliness . . .

INDIVIDUAL . . . Interest in the effect of foreign purchases here varies widely . . . Some prefer the angle dealing exclusively with booming stock favorites . . . Others take a broader view, concerning themselves with the effect on all business . . . It is the latter we like . . . For if all trade and industry is aided in moving into a prosperous position market activities will take care of themselves . . . Our "war baby" favorites are wholly dependent on U. S. defense spendings . . . Including such stocks as Colt's, American Machine & Foundry, Elgin, and Bath Iron . . . All previously noted and doing quite well . . .

TRADING POLICY . . . Of the moment by this column is bullish . . . Last week a buying spot was seen in the failure of average prices to seek new reaction lows . . . Now after a mild rally and a hesitant dip it seems as though another was developing . . . We would take advantage of it again . . . Still operating on the principle of quick disposal of stocks is facilitated by the nearness of old lows . . . Which once broken by both rail and industrial calls for immediate liquidation . . . It is a speculator's opportunity and should be treated as such . . .

NOTEBOOK . . . Wide moving war commodities, leather and hides are typical, have not collapsed . . . The chart shows a monthly compilation of one hide price . . . It climbed steadily even when war seemed stalemated . . . And since the high point has only drifted off to around the 14 cent level . . . And note the relation to the 1937 trend line . . . Consistently lower despite supposed wild bidding by those enamored of sudden war given profits . . . Many other commodities have behaved similarly . . .

Which leads to the conclusion there is less of a spectacular tone to the current upswing than there was in the domestic boom of '37 . . .

BOARDROOM BRIEFS . . . Higher, lower or sideways from now makes no difference in the chart picture of Chrysler . . . It is one of the finest . . . Stymied by strike arguments the issue has been heaved wonderfully . . . And it must be loaded with shorts . . . Given a break in the news, general or particular, it should get going with a bang . . . American Machine's tape action bespeaks accumulation . . . Even during dull sessions buyers appear when it approaches 15 . . . And merchandisers look as though anxious to make up lost ground . . .

GYRATIONS . . . In foreign exchange rates are taken to imply strengthening or lessening of "peace fears" . . . In particular is this view of the pound sterling's ups and downs . . . Such reasoning is dangerous business . . . There are two rates . . . Demand and forward . . . It is the former that has been rallying lately . . . The latter is not so responsive . . . Forward sterling on 90-day bills is not only sluggish but the quotation differential has widened . . . And if exchange operators are willing to sell sterling forward 90 days at $3.87 against $3.92 for demand then there has been little fundamental change in the status of war . . .

C. & O. RAISES DIVIDEND RATE

CLEVELAND, Nov. 22 (AP)—Directors of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway declared today an extra dividend of 50 cents a share, bringing total 1939 dividends to $2.50 as against $2 in 1938. The extra is payable Dec. 27 to stock of record Dec. 12.

Directors also voted to start 1940 off on a $2.50 basis. They declared a quarterly dividend of 62½ cents payable Jan. 1 to stock of record Dec. 12.

RETAIL STORE SALES IN GAIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (INS)—Under-Secretary of Commerce Noble today announced reports from 22,013 independent retail stores, located in 24 states, show a gain of 7½ per cent in dollar volume of sales for October compared with the same month last year.

Dollar value of sales reported last month amounted to $236,858,045, compared with $224,062,017 for the preceding month, and $238,908,861 for October, 1938.

Small Losses Predominate Stock Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—Fractional losses predominated in today's stock market, but now and then buoyed an occasional issue.

The pace was slow from the quiet opening on. Near noon far more shares were down than up.

Off most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas, Westinghouse Electric, Johns-Manville, Pennsylvania, Western Union and Union Carbide.

Those resistant included Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, American Radiator, Chesapeake & Ohio and Consolidated Edison.

Failure of any group to take leadership was attributed to tomorrow's holiday, with most traders merely engaged in evening up operations.

European markets were very quiet, but remained steady. Bonds were up a little and commodities mixed.

Among those to creep backward were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, New York Central, Western Union and Westinghouse Electric.

Followers of the steels discussed the Iron Age assertion that the industry's present record rate of output production would probably continue to the end of the year.

The periodical said new orders, as distinguished from those already on the books, were apparently heavy enough to support operation of capacity, and with the heavy backlog piled up in the last few months, were sufficient to support strong mills schedules through at least part of the first quarter.

Taken of the present leveling out of the industrial upturn was the fact electric power output for the week ended Nov. 18 rose only slightly from the preceding week and was under seasonal expectations.

Heaviest percentage gains over last year were in the coal, industrial and southern regions.

Engineering construction awards for the week ended Nov. 21, as reported by Engineering News-Record, totaled $47,855,000 against the unusually high total of $96,416,000 the previous period and $19,970,000 a year ago.

Markets Closed On Thursday

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—Thanksgiving Day, a week earlier than the traditional last Thursday in November, will be widely observed tomorrow by the country's principal financial and commodity exchanges.

The New York Stock and Curb Exchanges, banks and commodity futures markets will close. Outside of New York, the Boston Stock Exchange, grain markets in Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis, the New Orleans cotton market, Savannah and Jacksonville naval stores and various livestock markets will suspend trading.

Eastern Mass. Street Railway Co. First Preferred Stock Series A Dividend The Public Trustee have declared a dividend of $1.50 per share on First Preferred Series A of Eastern Mass. Big Christmas Rush To Buy Predicted

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—An "old-fashioned Christmas with gifts exchanged in greater quantity and variety than any year in the last decade," was forecast today by the National Retail Dry Goods Ass'n on basis of a rising business trend.

The association pointed out the shopping period would get off to a week's earlier start in 25 states and the District of Columbia observing tomorrow as Thanksgiving.

In states clinging to the old Thanksgiving date—Nov. 30 this year—merchants are preparing to push "shop early" programs in expectation of the biggest gift-giving Christmas since 1929, the announcement added.

Anticipating a 10 per cent trade gain, the association calculated sales in the traditional Thanksgiving-Christmas shopping spurge of department, dry goods, general merchandise and apparel stores would approximate $1,320,000,000—an increase of $120,000,000 over the comparable 1938 figure.

"More than a million jobs have been opened up in industry and part-time employment extended to full-time for many millions more," it noted.

"First-sharing with employees, in the form of holiday bonus, is considered likely to prove the largest since the Christmas season of 1936. When the Christmas rush reaches its peak, regular store forces throughout the country are expected to be augmented by 500,000 extra workers to help handle the busy trade."

Retail prices were figured as likely to average about 3 per cent above last year's Christmas levels. The association said $90,000,000 persons would come within scope of the long-handled Thanksgiving-Christmas season.

U. S. Power Production Up

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—Electric power production in the United States during the week ended Nov. 18 totalled 2,514,350,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

This was only slightly above 2,513,680,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week, but 10.7 per cent ahead of 2,270,296,000 in the comparable 1938 week.

The gain, less than seasonally expected, dropped the Associated Press index of power output, based on 1929-30 as 100, to 126.8 from 128.2 in the preceding week. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long term trend, stood at 116.7 a year ago.

With revenue increasing as a result of the fall business revival and employment gains, officials estimated the deficit for the current year would fall below the President's estimate of $3,350,000,000.

JANE BRYAN, SCREEN STAR, GREETED ON VISIT TO HUB

Shares Honors In New Film

Jane Bryan, co-starred with Paul Muni in his new picture, "We Are Not Alone," opening tomorrow on the Metropolitan screen, is honoring Boston with her enchanting presence today.

She is due to attend a special press preview of Warner's newest and most impressive production this morning. Later she is to be guest of honor at a press luncheon at the Copley-Plaza Hotel given by Warner Brothers' New England executives.

Miss Bryan, one of Warner's most brilliant young actresses, was hailed generally for her performance in the Bette Davis-starring picture, "The Old Maid." None was more enthusiastic about Jane's talents than was Miss Davis, who, at a Cape Cod get-together with Boston reviewers this summer, named her as the screen's brightest, young star.

Claire Trevor Stars in Saga

"Allegheny Uprising," RKO Radio's saga of America's pre-Revolutionary period with Claire Trevor and John Wayne, will have its Boston preview at Keith-Memorial Theater this evening at 7 and again at 10 o'clock. It will officially start a week's engagement tomorrow. Wayne plays James Smith, grim leader of the Pennsylvania settlers. Claire Trevor plays the daughter of a colonist.

JANE BRYAN, co-starred with Paul Muni in new picture "We Are Not Alone," opening tomorrow on Met screen. Miss Bryan is in Boston today to attend a special press showing of the picture.

The story is based on historic facts contained in Neil Swanson's novel, "The First Rebel." Supporting players include George Sanders, Brian Donlevy, Wilfred Lawson and Robert Barrat.

Record Run Holds Over 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington'

Mr. Boston and the rest of the family are going to Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters in such droves that the management is holding over the current film attraction, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," to accommodate them all.

From coast to coast, "Mr. Smith" is establishing record runs. In Chicago, where extra shows have been enforced, it is expected to go into its sixth week.

"Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which Frank Capra directed for Columbia, has for its co-stars, James Stewart and Jean Arthur. He is cast as a sincere, idealistic young man who goes to the Senate to fill an unexpired term. Miss Arthur is cast as his secretary who initiates him into the fine points of senatorial procedure.

Supporting players include Edward Arnold, Thomas Mitchell, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Ruth Donnelly, Eugene Pallette, Donald Bondi, Harry Carey and H. B. Warner.

Del Casino New RKO Star

Del Casino, tenor with the romantic air-lanes appeal, heads RKO Radio's new stage show, starting tomorrow.

Companion screen attractions will be "The Escape," with Kane Richmond, Amanda Duff, Edward Norris and Henry Armetta, and "Danger Flight," another Tailspin Tommy drama with John Trent and Marjorie Reynolds.

Popular and semi-classical songs are included in Del Casino's local repertoire.

Supporting him on the stage bill are Will and Gladys Ahern, rope-spinning comedy headliners of Ziegfeld's "Simple Simon," the Schwab-Mandel musical, "Good News," and other Broadway stage hits.

'Mystery of Mr. Wong' at Beacon

Beacon's attractions through tomorrow are "The Mystery of Mr. Wong," with Boris Karloff and Dorothy Tree, and "Quick Millions," another chapter in the lives of the screen's popular Jones family.

Shaw's Play To Be Repeated

Straw Hat Theater's first play of the season, Bernard Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple," will have its opening Thanksgiving Eve at Brattle Hall, Cambridge. It will be repeated Thursday and Friday evenings of the holiday week.

Heading the cast of this American Revolution satire are Albert Woll, Janice Miner, Clare Holman, Ralph Morrison and Carleton Spreadbury.

With this first of their winter play-series, the Straw Hatters are inaugurating a method of simplified staging designed and executed in their own workshop.

Seats on Sale For New Comedy

Seats go on sale at the Shubert box office tomorrow for the engagement of the new musical comedy, "Three After Three," starring Simon Simon, Mitzil Green and Mary Brian.

'The Old Maid' At Trans-Lux

"The Old Maid," starring New-ton's own Academy Award winner, Bette Davis, in one of her most portrayals, comes to the Trans-Lux screen, starting tomorrow.

It is the story of two cousins, Charlotte and Delia Lovell, who live in the same house in aristocratic Philadelphia in the period between 1861—when the Civil War broke out—and the 1880's. Keened as sisters, these two grow up to envy and distrust each other.

Miss Davis plays Charlotte, the old maid of the title, and Miriam Hopkins is cast as Delia. Others in the cast are Jane Bryan, Donald Crisp, Louise Fazenda, Jerome Cowan, Cecilia Loftus and DeWolf Hopper.

The co-feature, "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island," has the San Francisco World's Fair for its setting and Sidney Toler, playing the title role as Earl Derr Biggers celebrated detective.

Mink and Glitter

WE'RE ON your side, if you have very little money to spend, but are determined to look as though it were no object when you shopped... Bedeck yourself for the holiday season, look like the kind of very gay package someone tall and nice would like to receive on Christmas morning, tagged "To — with love."

Black with mink (or fur that you simply can't tell from mink) is this year's classic in dressy coats. With it you should wear black shoes, and your accessories may be black with gold or any of the pastels and high shades. A sumptuous-looking coat with couturier detail of cording is our suggestion today. London-dyed squirrel flows over the shoulders, but is handled with a very youthful air. Horizontal cording emphasized the fitted top half of the coat and sleeves, contrasting with the smooth flare of the skirt. The coat in misses' sizes is but $29.95.

And a giddy abettor for your cocktail and dinner and theater dates is the black crepe skirt with heavenly blue jacket, simply loaded with silver or gold metal embroidery. A trace military in cut and epaulet treatment of the shoulders. It's the new high pastel blue that can put such very special emphasis on the color of your eyes. This, my dears, is but $6.95, in misses' sizes.

Thanksgiving Super-Stuffing

By MARTHA LEE

Goodness knows, we're not talking about stuffing the family, though you'll be forgiven for thinking so, once you let them sample our sage stuffing for fowl, special stuffings for steak, chops and fish, and wild rice stuffing for game. And are they popular!

STUFFING HOLIDAY BIRD

First, comes stuffing for the holiday bird. For a turkey weighing about 12 pounds, you will need a loaf to a loaf and a half of bread (about 8 cups when cut into cubes). Use second day bread, slightly dry, rather than soft fresh bread. Cut bread into cubes. For every 2 cups of cubes: add ½ teaspoon powdered sage, ½ teaspoon thyme, 1 small onion, finely cut, 1 teaspoon salt, and pepper to taste. Melt 2 tablespoons butter and 1 tablespoon rich prepared mustard in ½ cup boiling water. Pour over the bread crumbs and toss together lightly with a fork or your hands. If this is not water sufficient to moisten, add a little more, tossing the stuffing as you do so.

If you are fond of an especially dry, rich dressing, use the above recipe with these changes: Toast the bread cubes before adding the seasoning; and double or triple the amount of butter to be used.

WILD RICE STUFFING FOR GAME

Last, here is an extravagant stuffing made with wild rice, delicious for game. Wild rice, mushroom and tart apple stuffing for a 6 pound goose: Wash 1 pound wild rice well in cold water. Add 3 cups boiling water, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon rich prepared mustard. Boil until water is absorbed. To this add 1 large tart cooking apple pared and cubed, 1 cup (8 oz. can) mushrooms, and 1-3 cup onions, chopped fine, browned in 4 tablespoons butter. Mix lightly and use for stuffing.

Another delicious stuffing for the holiday season is made with Brazil nuts, which give the stuffing a delightfully rich flavor.

BRAZIL NUT STUFFING

2 medium onions, minced
½ cup melted butter
2 cups sliced Brazil nuts
Salt and pepper
Sage or other herbs
8 cups soft bread crumbs
Sauté onions for two minutes in butter. Combine nuts and seasonings with bread crumbs and add to butter. Cook two minutes, stirring constantly. If a moist stuffing is desired add a little water. Makes enough stuffing for one 10-pound turkey.

For a four-pound roasting chicken use ½ Brazil Nut Stuffing recipe. Extra stuffing may be placed in a pan and cooked for 30 minutes or during last half hour of roasting.

You Can Be Beautiful

New Cleansing Era

By ARLINE GOULD

PUT THIS unfamiliar word into your beauty lexicon: "Adsorbing." It hails a new era in cleansing methods.

Even if you live in crystal-clear country air, your skin should have specialized cleansing if it is to look as translucent and fair as it actually can. That's because the tally of skin elimination counts 16 to 32 ounces of waste every day! True, that's the total body count, but your face takes a large share of it because the exposed complexion has to fight through layers of make-up, acid, perspiration and dust.

This cleanser, which smells like a hyacinth, is a blend of oil hypodermized to make them thoroughly compatible with the functions of the skin. The story of its action is explained this way: When applied to the skin, colloidal molecules of oil instantly adhere to particles of powder and rouge and other soil, absorbing them, and divorcing them from your skin. No seepage back into the pores!

It all takes less than a minute to apply and remove. No massaging should be done. A moment's time will serve to soften and absorb accumulated soil, then wipe off the creamy stuff with a dry towel or tissue. You'll marvel at your skin's cleanliness, and will find after very few such treatments a tremulous, lovely clarity. If you'd like to learn about this really unusual cleanser, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE WALTZ was King at the Balinese Room last night . . . The violin and three-fourths time successfully laid siege to the usual domain of the saxophone and swing as Boston's socially prominent waltz lovers glided and whirled to their hearts' content at the first of a series of Tuesday evening waltzing parties . . .

These waltzing supper parties are sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bundy, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Elliot, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Mrs. E. Schier Welch, William H. B. Pratt and Hamilton Warren . . .

Many of the ladies entered into the spirit of the occasion by wearing hoop skirts and long white kid gloves, and flowers tucked in the back of their hair . . . while their escorts turned out in white ties and tails . . . Isabella Grandin was resplendent in a silver and white brocade gown with long white gloves and a sequin snood covering her dark hair . . .

Mrs. Louis McClellan wore a festive fuchsia tiara to match her necklace and form a brilliant contrast to her powder blue taffeta gown . . . She and Louis were at a long table of waltz enthusiasts including Eleanor Shaw in pale gray trimmed with silver kid, Carolyn Pierce in flame crepe with gold trimming, Mary Morison and Helene Edgell in an effective gown with a full ruby velvet skirt which she held out as she danced . . . The bodice was silver taffeta with ruby bows at the neckline . . .

There were so many enthusiastic dancers, all waiting to glide and whirl to every measure of Harry Marshall's special string music that the room was divided into three sections and people sitting in each took their turns dancing . . . Even the younger generation was well represented . . .

Nancy Putnam Smith, in a party with two of her sister debs, Anne Fay and Virginia Hoar, jumped up from her table and pulled her escort to the edge of the floor the minute Harry raised his baton . . . Nancy wore a gold brocade dress to set off her lovely red hair, Anne was in powder blue satin and Virginia chose a coral taffeta . . . Their escorts were M. Bernard Fox, the nationally famous figure skater, George Cunningham, Jr., and Roger Prosty . . .

Oleomargarine Alike in Digestibility

How do oleomargarine brands compare in digestibility? Mrs. J. S. Q.

The rate of digestion of a fat depends on the ability of the digestive organs to emulsify it and thus bring the digestive enzymes into contact with a large surface. The digestibility of the oleomargarines is similar to that of lard. They are all alike at least 97 per cent digestible.

Gum is a Good Tooth Cleanser

Is chewing gum beneficial to the stomach? B. J.

Gum chewing has been shown by carefully developed tests to be an excellent means of keeping teeth free from contaminating substances. It also exercises your muscles and stimulates the flow of saliva. If not indulged in to excess, this saliva produces no disturbing effect when swallowed and taken into the stomach. The soothing effect of gum chewing on nervousness goes for you, but the mental condition which could be far more disturbing to stomach and digestion.

Whole Cereals Richest Source

Would you be so kind as to tell me what foods contain vitamin B-1? Mrs. H. A.

Nature has stored vitamin B-1 in the embryos of seeds. For that reason flours from which the embryo has been sifted contain less B-1 than whole wheat. A liberal use of whole cereals, therefore, would insure a good supply of vitamin B-1. Nuts and green vegetables are also good sources of vitamin B-1. Meats such as beef, and especially pork, supply a good amount of this vitamin. However, when meats are cooked, there is a definite loss—roasting or broiling beef cuts down the supply from 50 to 60 per cent. The use of whole cereals, both in breads and as breakfast food, has much to recommend it.

Pickles Have Food Value

Do pickles and relishes have any food value? Mrs. L. M.

The principal constituent of pickles is the cucumber. Although the cucumber contains a large percentage of water, a pound of cucumbers will give you about 60 calories. The cucumber is also a good source of calcium, phosphorus, iron and other minerals.

Of course, other foodstuffs are used in making pickles—spices of cauliflower, cabbage, onion, etc. Used as pickles or relishes they have their normal value. Vinegar and other condiments have a certain value in increasing digestion.

Vitamin B Prevents Tooth Decay

What vitamins are best for keeping teeth and gums sound? G. H.

The causes of tooth decay are multiple, and we do not yet know all of them. However, enough experiments have been conducted to prove that vitamin D has tooth-protective power. There is less tooth decay in sunny regions. Taking cod liver oil is definitely beneficial. Exposure to an ultraviolet-ray lamp is helpful. We can, therefore, advise attention to the vitamin-D intake as one aid to keeping teeth sound.

A Christmas Carol

By
CHARLES DICKENS

THE SPIRIT dropped beneath the extinguisher, so that the cap covered its whole form; but though Scrooge pressed it down with all his force, he could not hide the light, which streamed from under it, in an unbroken flood upon the ground. He was conscious of being exhausted, and overcome by an irresistible drowsiness; and, further, of being in his own bedroom. He gave the cap a parting squeeze, in which his hand relaxed; and had barely time to reel to bed, before he sank into a heavy sleep.

Awaking in the middle of a prodigiously tough snore, and sitting up in bed to get his thoughts together, Scrooge had no occasion to be told that the bell was again upon the stroke of one. He felt that he was restored to consciousness in the tight nick of time, for the especial purpose of holding a conference with the second messenger dispatched to him through Jacob Marley's intervention.

Now, being prepared for almost anything, he was not by any means prepared for nothing; and consequently, when the bell struck one and no shape appeared, he was taken with a violent fit of trembling. Five minutes, ten minutes, a quarter of an hour went by, yet nothing came.

All this time, he lay upon his bed, the very core and center of a blinding of ruddy light, which streamed upon it when the clock proclaimed the hour; and which, being only light, was more alarming than a dozen ghosts, as he was powerless to make out what it means or would be at; and was somewhat apprehensive that he might be at that very moment an interesting case of spontaneous combustion, without having the consolation of knowing it.

At last, however, he began to think—as you or I would have thought at first; for it is always the person not in the predicament who knows what ought to have been done in it, and would unquestionably have done it, too—at last, I say, he began to think that the source and secret of this ghostly

The Story So Far:

SCROOGE, cynical and embittered, has been compelled by the ghosts of Yuletide to look back through the years and see himself in the scenes of his happy childhood and young manhood. He has begged the Spirit to leave and to haunt him no longer. But the Spirit compels him to see more.

light might be in the adjoining room, from whence on further tracing it seemed to shine.

"KNOW ME BETTER"

This idea taking full possession of his mind, he got up softly and shuffled in his slippers to the door. The moment Scrooge's hand was on the lock, a strange voice called him by name, and bade him enter. He obeyed.

It was his own room. There was no doubt about that. But it had undergone a surprising transformation. The walls and ceiling were so hung with living green that it looked a perfect grove; from every part of which bright, gleaming berries glistered.

"Come in!" exclaimed the Ghost. "Come in! and know me better, man!"

Scrooge entered timidly, and hung his head before the Spirit. He was not the dogged Scrooge he had been; and though the Spirit's eyes were clear and kind, he did not seem to meet them, as if he were afraid to do so.

"I am the Ghost of Christmas Present," said the Spirit, "Look upon me!"

Scrooge reverently did so. It was clothed in one simple deep green robe, or mantle, bordered with white fur. This garment hung so loosely on the figure that its capacious breast was bare, as if disclaiming to be worded or concealed by any artifice.

Its feet, observable beneath the ample folds of the garment, were also bare; and on its head it wore no other covering than a holly wreath, set here and there with shining holly-leaves.

Its dark brown curls were long and free; free as its genial face, its sparkling eye, its open hand, its cheery voice, its unconstrained demeanor, and its joyful air. Glided round its middle was an antique scabbard; but no sword was in it; and the ancient sheath was eaten up with rust.

"You have never seen the like of me before?" exclaimed the Spirit.

"Never," Scrooge made answer to it.

"Have never walked forth with the younger members of my family; meaning (for I am very young) my elder brothers born in these later years?" pursued the Phantom. "I don't think I have," said Scrooge. "I am afraid I have not. Have you had many brothers, Spirit?"

"More than 1000," said the Ghost. "A tremendous family to provide for," muttered Scrooge. The Ghost of Christmas Present rose.

"Spirit," said Scrooge, submissively, "conduct me where you will; I am at your service in compulsion, and I learned a lesson which is working now. Tonight, if you have taught to teach me, let me profit by it."

"Touch my robe!"

Scrooge did as he was told and held it fast.

Holly, mistletoe, red berries, ivy, turkeys, geese, game, poultry, brawn, meat, pies, sausages, oysters, pies, puddings, fruit and punch, all vanished instantly. So did the room, the fire, the ruddy glow, the hour of night, and they stood in the city streets on Christmas morning, where (for the weather was severe) the people made a rough, but brisk and not unpleasant, kind of music, in scraping the snow from the pavement in front of their dwellings and from the tops of their houses, whence it was mad delight to the boys to see it come plumping down into the road below and splitting into artificial little snowstorms.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

The house fronts looked black enough, and the windows blacker, contrasting with the smooth white sheet of snow upon the roofs and with the drier snow upon the ground, which last deposit had been plowed up in deep furrows by the heavy wheels of carts and wagons. Furrows that crossed and recrossed each other hundreds of times where the great streets branched off and made intricate channels, hard to trace, in the thick yellow mud and icy water.

The sky was gloomy, and the shortest streets were choked up with a dingy mist, half thawed, half frozen, whose heavier particles descended in a shower of sooty atoms, as if all the chimneys in Great Britain had by one consent caught fire and were blazing away to their dear heart's content.

There was nothing very cheerful in the climate or the town and yet was there an air of cheerfulness abroad that the clearest summer air and brightest summer sun might have endeavored to diffuse in vain.

In time the bells ceased and the bakers were shut up, and yet there was a genial shadowing forth of all these dinners and the progress of their cooking, in the thawed blotch of wet above each baker's oven, where the pavement smoked as if its stones were cooking, too.

"Is there a peculiar flavor in what you sprinkle from your torch?" asked Scrooge.

"There is. My own."

"Would it apply to any kind of dinner on this day?" asked Scrooge. "To any kindly given, To a poor one most."

"Why to a poor one most" asked Scrooge.

"Because it needs it most."

"Spirit," said Scrooge, after a moment's thought, "I wonder you, of all the beings in the many worlds about us should desire the cramp these people's opportunities of innocent enjoyment."

"I!" cried the Spirit.

"You would deprive them of their means of dining every seventh day, often the only day on which they can be said to dine at all," said Scrooge; "wouldn't you?"

"I!" cried the Spirit.

"You seek to close these places on the Seventh Day?" said Scrooge. "And it comes to the same thing."

"I seek!" exclaimed the Spirit. "Forgive me if I am wrong. It has been done in your name, or at least in that of your family," said Scrooge.

"There are some upon this earth of your," returned the Spirit, "who lay claim to know us, and who do their deeds of passion, pride, ill-will, hatred, envy, bigotry and selfishness in our name, who are as strange to us, and all our kith and kin, as if they had never lived. Remember that, and charge their doings on themselves, not us."

Scrooge promised that he would; and they went on, invisible, as they had been, into the suburbs of the town. It was a remarkable quality of the Ghost (which Scrooge had observed at the baker's), that notwithstanding his gigantic size, he could accommodate himself to any place with ease; and that he stood beneath a low roof quite as gracefully and like a supernatural creature as it was possible he could have done in any lofty hall.

And perhaps it was the pleasure the good Spirit had in showing off this power of his, or else it was his kind, generous, hearty nature and his sympathy with all poor men, that led him straight to Scrooge's clerks; for there he went, and took Scrooge with him, holding to his robe; and on the threshold of the door the Spirit smiled, and stopped to bless Bob Cratchit's dwelling with the sprinklings of his torch. Think of that! Bob had but fifteen "Bob" a week himself; he pocketed on Saturday but fifteen copies of his Christian name; and yet the Ghost of Christmas Present blessed his four-roomed house!

A MERRY FAMILY

Then up rose Mrs. Cratchit, Cratchit's wife, dressed out but poorly in a twice-torn gown, but brave in ribbons, which are cheap and make a goodly show for assiduity; and she laid the cloth, assisted by Belinda Cratchit, second of her daughters, also brave in ribbons; while Master Peter Cratchit plunged a fork into the saucepan of potatoes, and getting the corners of his monstrous shirt collar (Bob's private property, conferred upon his son and heir in honor of the day) into his mouth, rejoiced to find himself so gallantly attired, and yearned to show his linen in the fashionable parks.

And now two smaller Cratchits, boy and girl, came tearing in, screaming that outside the baker's they had smelled the goose, and known it for their own; and basking in luxurious thoughts of sage and onion, these young Cratchits danced about the table and exalted Master Peter Cratchit to the skies, while he (not proud, although his collar nearly choked him) blew the fire, until the slow potatoes bobbing up, knocked loudly at the saucepan lid to be let out and peeled.

"What has ever got your precious father, then?" said Mrs. Cratchit. "And your brother, Tiny Tim? And Martha wasn't as late last Christmas Day by half an hour!"

"Here's Martha, Mother," said a girl appearing as she spoke. "Here's Martha, Mother!" cried the two young Cratchits, "Hurrah! There's such a goose, Martha!"

"Why, bless your heart alive, my dear, how late you are!" said Mrs. Cratchit, kissing her a dozen times, and taking off her shawl and bonnet for her with officious zeal. "We'd a deal of work to finish up last night," replied the girl "and had to clear away this morning, Mother!"

BLONDIE

"Cold" Cash!

I'LL SEND FOR YOU

A Complete Short Story Daily on This Page

By ANTHONY RUD

TOWARD the chalked board in front of Joe Damato's Bar and Grill on West Street walked the oddly assorted pair. The man carried one flashy and cheap-looking airplane bag. The tall woman had a cane suitcase, a worn handbag looped over her left wrist, and a filled laundry bag.

The man wore a green felt hat with a perky red feather projecting upward from the band. He was a small, dapper fellow. He frowned and walked impatiently fast, having to stop every few yards to allow the tall blonde woman to catch up. He wore a trench coat with the belt pulled extremely tight. Below the belt showed trouser legs of a loud brown and yellow check, discolored tan spats, and patent leather oxfords scuffed and scuffed.

He said something in a low tone, but the tall woman shook her head. "No more, Manuel. You would go out to drink, or to bet on horses. My half is mine."

She was a full three inches taller than he. Young, full-bodied, calm-eye, and yellow of hair. Vikings had been her progenitors. A plain gold band on the third finger of her bare and reddened left hand testified that she and the dapper little Mexican were married. In the heterogeneous crowd this was the only woman. She intercepted bleary smiles, cozening looks, but her blue eyes remained calm. She put down her laundry bag and suitcase beside her husband's.

He was rolling a cigaret deftly, lighting it, staring at the board and seeing nothing that interested him. "Not a thing!" Manuel snarled. "I thank you're crazy, Inga. Who wants to go out on the water, now it's cold? I tell you, let me put down two bucks on Nonpareil at Agua Caliente. That fourth race, it is in the bag!"

"WE BOTH SAVE"

"No have many others been in the bag," the woman returned calmly. "However, not our bag. It was too bad for you could not get along with Mr. Hastings. But he would not have caretakers who go out to drink and set the fires with cigarettes."

"I tell you, Manuel, it is only one thing for you and me. I will get the job. You will get the job. We both save—only I know how to leave. Some time I will have enough, and I'll send for you. Then we will work a farm in the old-country on shares. And maybe—"

"Ah, b—!" the little man snorted. "You might get a job, an' how long it take you to save a hundred dollars? One year! Poder de Dios! Me, one time I am lucky and three, five hundred I have!"

"No, Inga, I will play the race, and bimby I'll send for you! But the job. Yes, we must have them first. You think maybe we could go together, maybe?"

"For the first time a certain wisdom was apparent in the little fellow's voice."

"Probably he did care for the tall, well-proportioned woman. It was just that his mercurial temperament and untidiness ways had got them into trouble. He would always work solemnly, and ungraciously, leaving his dollar or his two dollars. Then he would place it on a horse."

And when one of these bets actually did win, he would drink and lose another job.

"For over an hour they stood there on the sidewalk, watching the dirty little man come from inside the bar.

Sometimes he wiped off a chalked notice with a moist, incredibly filthy rag.

Other times he wrote down: S. A. B.'s Pier 47, or 2 cabin boys, Helmsingfors, Pier 8.

Inga touched Manuel's arm, but he shook his head.

"There might be a chance. You do not look old. You are small," she whispered. But Manuel frowned. He did not know where the S. S. Helmsingfors might be bound, but it had a cold and flashy name.

"Nah-h, we want to go together, if we can," he snapped. "And why bother the war? It don't mean a thing to us. Valgame, but I am hungry! What do you think, Inga?"

With a resigned air as, though this was a well-known ritual, the woman opened her handbag and went deep into it, returning with two silver omeas. She shrugged heavily, then smiled faintly.

"Hamburgers are a nickel here," she said placidly. "Bring me one. You can get your beer and a sandwich. I will wait here. Something might come, and I do not wish to miss it."

The little man was off in an instant. He did not go inside Joe Damato's, but made for another bar further down the street. The blonde woman moves as if to stop him, but turned just in time to reach quickly and seize the wrist of a dirty, shifty-looking undersized fellow who was reaching down behind her back to grab Manuel's suitcase.

The would-be thief whined. Then suddenly he jerked his arm up, wrestled free, and turned, running like a mangled rabbit for the corner and turning at high speed.

Inga sighed, and did nothing at all. She planted her strong legs so the toes of her shoes touched the outsoles of the little array of luggage. Then she resumed her waiting.

LAST OPPORTUNITY

Twenty minutes passed, half an hour. Nothing appeared on the blackboard, and the little man did not return with the hamburgers.

After a while the woman turned to face south, and a slightly worried expression clouded the clear blue of her eyes.

For more than a year she had taken care of Manuel. The habit was hard to break, even here on the waterfront, where it had been agreed that they would part if need be.

Both realized that it was a slight hope at best that they could get bedths on the same ship.

Now the chucker of the free employment agency came out from the bar and wrote down a terse line. It stated that two assistant cooks were wanted for a freighter bound through the Canal.

A slight sound escaped Inga's lips, and she stared harder at the saloon, down the street which Manuel had entered. He had been a short order cook in a diner out on Jericho Turnpike when she first met him—in the days she had been but Manuel did not heed his attention to fade. Instead the petty fellow seemed to starve. The light faded out of his black eyes. He took up the nickel, arose, and tossed it in his palm apathetically. Then he walked to the busy bar and ordered one hamburger.

It was planked down in front of him. Shrugging thin shoulders, he took it from the heavy plate, then walked swiftly out of the bar and down toward the spot where his wife awaited.

"Here's the hamburger," he said, wade. "Can man!" said just a while. "This is the best," she said, and gave him the sandwich. "I just want to eat now."

"No!" he cried with an upward inflection. He took the hamburger and wolfed it down, never doubting her word for an instant. She turned back to the board, head shaking just a little.

Just then by some miracle a whole batch of chalked notices appeared. First came one which made Inga cry out and jog Manuel's elbow. Some more cooks were wanted, this time by the United Fruit Company, check 24.

"You can do that, Manuel! It is a good one!" she whispered.

The little man stared, the last bite of his sandwich stopped between his teeth. The United Fruit boats? They plied south, where it was warm. Mexico was south... home...

"I think I'll look into that, Inga!" he said, and hurried inside Joe Damato's.

WAS IT THE END?

The woman, though, was staring at another notice. Stewardesses wanted, the Norwegian Line... that plied to the north... toward home...

She suddenly bent, picked up all the baggage, and hurried into the bar.

Ten minutes later she and Manuel emerged, each carrying personal luggage. They stopped there.

"It is good-by—for now," said Inga, the slightest of sighs moving her ample breast. "But I will save and send for you yooast as soon as..."

"Kiss me, dear!" he said and stood on tiptoe. "You watch my smoke! I'll make a killing and send you money for a ticket, before three months are up!"

She kissed him, embraced him for a moment, then reached down for her burdens. The man did the same.

In five more seconds the man was walking south, nervously, darting glances here and there. Inga had not looked back. Her blue eyes serene she was heading north... toward home.

Had it crossed the minds of either that no future address had been mentioned? Or was this a parting foreordained, both of them, knowing and accepting the fact?

Over at her pier in the Hudson the Gray-hued Queen Mary whistled dull, booming music.

a housemaid at a place in Roslyn, before they had become caretakers for the Hastings.

Manuel still did not appear. Minutes passed. Four or five of the unshaven gentry of the sidewalk lounged inside. By and by the call for cooks was erased.

At the moment the chance disappeared, Manuel was on his knees in the back room of the down-street saloon. A pile of nickels and dimes lay under his left hand, on top of a fold of the trench coat. There was even one quarter. A total of $1.45 in change.

A mulatto with flashing, perfect teeth was rolling dice, and chanting to them imploringly.

Four men beside Manuel crouched there, betting change, sometimes defiantly putting forth a green, wrinkled rag of a $1 bill when their time came to shoot...

But the little man's run of luck had ended. When he got the dice this time he lost twice instead of rolling the desired seven or eleven. Then he got ten as his point, and promptly threw a seven. Magically the pile of silver had melted. A lone nickel lay there on his trench coat.

Another man had the dice now, giving it to her.

"Why were you so long? There was a chance, but now it's gone. Have you had your sandwich?"

She did not mention the beer.

"Sure, Sure," he said with a flimsy attempt at swagger that was just somehow pathetic. "I got watching a card game..."

Into the calm blue eyes came a look of infinite understanding. The

Novocaine Grid Aid O.K'd for Macdonald

Torbie Macdonald
Crimson Grid Captain's
Treatment Revealed

That modern science is using synthetic drugs like novocaine to eliminate pain as a result of football injuries was revealed today when the Harvard Athletic Association broke all precedent by issuing a statement in connection with the injury of Torbie Macdonald, Harvard football captain.

According to the report, Macdonald was given an injection before the Penn-Harvard game for an ankle injury sustained a week before the opening game with Bates.

The Crimson leader played for a short while in the Penn fracas but missed the Dartmouth, Princeton and Army games not to mention the Bates and University of Chicago contests, which preceded the above named contest.

Evidently the statement was issued to clear up a situation hinted at by certain newspapers that Macdonald was benched for other reasons.

DOCTORS CALLED

Only after three physicians were called in by Dr. Augustus Thordike, chief surgeon of the Harvard team, regarding Macdonald was the drug used.

The full medical report as issued by the H. A. follows:

"One of the prominent neurosurgeons in Boston was consulted concerning the possibility of novocaine injection. The use of this treatment dates back to 1935, when Prof. Rene Leriche of the University of Strasbourg, France, published two papers on the use of novocaine in the treatment of sprains. There have been limited applications of the treatment in this country.

"The United States Naval Academy physician, Lieut.-Commr. C. R. Ball, used it successfully last year in treating Harold Hansen and Damon Cooper, varsity ends. The treatment was reported to the American College of Surgeons at their meeting in Philadelphia on October 17 this year, and has been discussed by Dr. Augustus Thordike of the Harvard Medical School and the Harvard football physician in his monograph 'Athletic Injuries.'

DRUG RECOMMENDED

"The Boston surgeon recommended that the treatment be tried on Capt. Macdonald. Trial was made on October 19, two days before the Harvard-Pennsylvania game. This produced a small area of anesthesia which is now interfering with muscular or tendon functions. The trial was most satisfactory and it was decided to use the treatment on the Saturday of the Harvard-Pennsylvania game.

"Captain Macdonald's ankle tendon injuries were aggravated by a kick in the Pennsylvania game. After the game and a 48 hour rest, a second consultant recommended complete rest, heat and massage, and hoped to have Captain Macdonald ready for the Princeton game on November 4. However, in the week of the Princeton game it was decided that he was not ready to play.

TAKEN ILL

The Harvard Medical Staff expected Macdonald to play against Army until he was stricken with an attack of acute abdominal pain on Wednesday night, Nov.

GEORGE BROWN, ICE VETERAN, TO JOIN BRUINS

MONTREAL, Nov. 22 (AP)—George Brown, who announced his retirement from hockey last spring after several seasons with Montreal Canadiens and New Haven Eagles, left here for Boston where he said he expected to join the Bruins as a defenceman.

Brown said he decided to come out of retirement when Art Ross, Boston manager, got in touch with him earlier this week.

On Thursday morning he had an elevated blood count and the Harvard Medical Staff sent him to Stillman Infirmary. During the day a surgical consultant examined Macdonald, supposing acute appendicitis. The surgeon said Macdonald should be carefully observed. He was discharged from Stillman Infirmary, Friday afternoon, but the Harvard Medical Staff decided his physical condition was not such as to warrant his playing against Army.

"Macdonald now is in first class physical condition."

Manly Driving Tufts Squad

Coach Lew Manly is driving his Tufts squad to the limit in an effort to organize an offense which will be adequate for the objective game with Mass. State at Amherst on Saturday which will close the Tufts season.

A victory over State would give the Jumbos real satisfaction, for their season has been highly unsatisfactory.

There is unusual rivalry in the backfield this week, for Carl Arthur Griffin is the only senior who holds a regular position, and Arthur Moore, the only other back who is playing his final game, is certain to be used as a substitute.

With three positions open, Jack West is favored to start in one due to his ability at blocking while the other two backs are a tossup between Art Harrison, Murray Kenny, Bob Patterson, Bob Rutter, Norman Pare and Grant Curtis, all of whom have started at least one game this year.

TAYLOR ELECTED CAPTAIN

BURLINGTON Vt., Nov. 22 (AP)—Frank Taylor, of Brattleboro, who led the University of Vermont in football scoring this fall with 29 points, was elected captain of the 1940 team. He plays halfback.

DEWEY PITT TO JOIN BIG TEN

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 22 (AP)—Western Conference football teams have forgiven a chastened University of Pittsburgh its "athletic sins" of former years and are ready to do battle with the Panthers on the gridiron.

Pitt meets Ohio State Sept. 28. The Panthers played their last series with a Big Ten team with Wisconsin in 1937 and 1938. Pittsburgh also has contracted to play Purdue and Minnesota in 1941.

The conference unofficially severed relations with Pitt because it did not approve of the latter's athletic policy. But Pitt has since cleaned its athletic skirts.

"We're convinced Pittsburgh has turned over a new leaf and is doing a good job," explained L. W. St. John Ohio State athletic director.

"Pitt invited conference officials to look into its new set-up and to counsel with it. The Big Ten found that Pittsburgh has done more than a satisfactory job in reshaping its athletic system and it deserves a chance."

The resumption of relations renewed and intensified the often-recurring rumors that Pitt eventually would replace University of Chicago in the Conference.

Sources close to the Conference insist Chicago has a place in the circuit as long as it wants it, but the fact remains the Maroons scheduled only three Conference games this season, two less than any other team.

The Maroons are far below the other teams in club strength, and school officials have been silent, if not indifferent, to the lack of success of this year's battered team.

West Virginia Leaps At Pitt's Move

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22 (AP)—Athletic Director Jimmy Hagan of the University of Pittsburgh declared today that replacing of West Virginia with Ohio State on the 1940 schedule "is no indication Pitt is going into the Big Ten."

"We had a chance to look Ohio State so we dropped West Virginia to keep within the required eight games," he said. "We played them before, didn't we, without joining the Western Conference?"

Reports the Panthers were seeking a conference berth were bolstered by the possibility five Big Ten teams would be added to their schedules.

HAD SENT CONTRACT

Games are being considered tentatively with Indiana and another school for 1941. A series with Purdue and Minnesota already has been booked.

B. C. ELEVEN RATED WITH EAST'S BEST; KANSAS FOE TOUGH

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP)—There is a generally-accepted idea hereabouts that the Boston College Eagles are about as good a team as you'll find in the East, even though they don't have a spotless record like those of Cornell and Duquesne.

They may be able to prove it this week-end even before their climax contest with Holy Cross, which enjoys similar high regard.

Boston College has slipped up only just once this season, losing a 7-0 decision to Florida on Columbus Day. Since then they've teamed Temple, Auburn and Detroit in "major" tilts and come up against Kansas State Saturday.

KANSAS TOUGH

Off the records, that doesn't look like specially tough opposition. Kansas State has lost four of its last five games in the Big Six, even dropping an upset decision to Iowa State last week.

But the Wildcats managed to give the mightiest teams of the Big Six, Missouri and Oklahoma, very close games.

And they have done it without Elmer Hackney, the kingpin of the backfield. If, by any chance, the "one man gang" should get back into action for the season's final game, it would be an entirely different K State team.

The game enjoys the distinction of being the only important inter-sectional affair on the eastern program.

CORNELL VS. PENN

The big games, from the stand point of the season's records, and the unofficial eastern championship, are unbeaten and untied Cornell against Pennsylvania, and Duquesne, also boasting a spotless record, against Carnegie Tech.

Both these leaders face traditional enemies that are out to create upsets.

The rest of the program is given over to such old standbys of every eastern season, Yale-Harvard, Colgate-Columbia, Navy-Princeton, Pitt-Penn State and Lafayette-La.

Rich, with such lesser events as Villanova-Manhattan and Bucknell-George Washington tossed in for good measure.

ANGER QUILTS TRACK

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22 (AP)—Lou Anger, Hollywood motion picture executive, quit as president and general manager of the Agua Caliente race track. He took charge a year ago and operated the track successfully on a week-end basis.

Anger, Hollywood motion picture executive, quit as president and general manager of the Agua Caliente race track. He took charge a year ago and operated the track successfully on a week-end basis.

After the Ohio engagement, the Panthers will take on Missouri, Southern Methodist, Fordham, Nebraska, Carnegie Tech, Penn State and Duke.

Expressions of surprise came from West Virginia over the Mountaineers being left off the schedule.

There had been no indication of ending the long-standing rivalry which started between the schools in 1885.

West Virginia already had submitted a contract for the 1940 game to Pitt for signature.

Hagan said he had no agreement, verbal or otherwise, to play West Virginia in 1940, but Mountaineer Athletic Director Roy Hawley said from Morgantown, W. Va., "I insist Hagan and I talked things over months before our last game in Pittsburgh on Oct. 7 and I figured everything was O. K."

"Now I am stuck with an open date and with little chance of filling it at this late stage."

EAGLES ALL SET FOR 'CATS'

Boston College will be able to meet the keyed up competition which it undoubtedly will get from Wes Fry's Kansas State Wildcats this week-end with a squad that's in near top physical shape.

Lou Kidhardt, he of the torn ligaments, and Frank Davis, he of the infected throat, are apparently out of the fray, but the other 38 men on the squad are in pretty decent condition.

Kidhardt, a starter in the '37 and '38 Holy Cross games, is hoping against hope that his knee will come around for the Holy Cross game, Dec. 2, but the doctors have their doubts. Davis, after a two weeks stay in bed, will likely be ready to show against the Crusaders.

The Boston College unit will have to be in top shape for both Kansas State and Holy Cross. Since the former is the first visitor, the Leahy organization is naturally pointing for this week's Fenway Park clash.

LAST GAME FOR KANSAS

This is the last game on the Kansas '39 schedule, and though an unexpected loss to Iowa State last Saturday didn't make the Fry team exactly jovial, Eagle End Coach Johnny Druze, who scouted the Wildcats at that game and also the week previous, when the States lost to Oklahoma, says:

"Friends, you can throw last week's performance right out the window."

"The Kansas squad is a big, fast, experienced bunch and you can bet your bottom dollar they'll give us a busy afternoon."

DRUZE KNOWS WEINER

Of the Kansas crowd, tackle Berner Weiner, end Don Crumbaker, quarterback, Melvin Seeley and Gene Fair, halfback, Jim Brock and Kent Duwe impressed Scout Druze.

Weiner, incidentally played on the same team with Druze at Irvington, N. J. high school. After graduation, Johnny went directly to Fordham, Weiner matriculated at a prep school before going to college.

Come what may though, the Eagles will be ready for the western invasion, and with keymen like Henry Toczylowski and Ed Cowbig, Dick Harrison and Joe Nanzo, all former members of the disabled list once again in top shape, Kansas State, as big as it is and as good as it has been cracked up to be, will have 60 minutes of the steetst kind of competition.

3 HARVARD CAPTAINS PLAY LAST GRID GAME

By DAVE GLUECK

Three Harvard captains will start their last game of football when the Crimson line up against Yale in the Stadium on Saturday. Macdonald, Coleman and Healey are the only senior regulars on the Cambridge squad, they all head major sports besides playing a team football.

Torby Macdonald is of course the gridiron chief. Bill Coleman takes over in hockey this winter, and Tom Healey will lead the baseball team next spring. Although the boys will be playing their last game of college football, they will all face Yale again at least once.

Healey and Coleman will end their respective captaincies with the "two out of three" baseball and hockey series.

Macdonald will certainly run on the track team that faces the Elis next spring, and will probably also find time to make colleague Healey's baseball line.

Whether this proves that Harvard captains all play football, or that Harvard football players are unusually versatile, is a more or less theoretical question.

However, it looks as though the three boys are primarily interested in the "fall" game, and only incidentally clever enough to do the other things too.

Coleman was so set on making the football team that he asked Coach Harlow to let him spend his sophomore season with the JV's, where he could get more game experience than as a third stringer on the varsity squad.

Healey has always managed to carry spring practice along with his baseball and A study average. When the three veterans huddle for their last grid cheer, they can all look forward to other athletic triumphs, but behind them will lie the only minutes ever spent, as football players, on Soldiers Field.

The fact that their muscle prominence is not yet finished will temper the post-game letdown, it will not change the fact that their most important college competition—the Harvard-Yale game senior year—is over.

From the point of view of next year's grid club, this game is almost as important. Harlow has repeatedly declared that Macdonald is one of the best backs in the East, that his offense was built around him, that you could call it the Macdonald rather than the Harlow offense.

The Crimson coach has called Healey the most underrated player in the country, and the best tackle to play under him during the Cambridge stay.

Coleman, a steady utility player, has moved from tackle to center to running guard, to blocking back, and lately, as the first Harvard blocking back to carry the ball or receive passes, he has fans supposing that he be tried at halfback.

Loss of the captain will be most appreciated by the boys who are left behind. Without Healey between them to help out in the power spots, Sophomore Dick Peister and Gene Lovett will find goal line stands and wedge charges a very different story.

Capt. Stack, Seymour

Miss Eli Scrimmage

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 22 (AP)—The second string eleven fired Harvard plays against the Yale varsity, as Coach Ducky Pond started intensive drills for the clash with the Crimson at Cambridge Saturday.

Two Eli standbys, Capt. Bill Stack and backfield star Hoyt Seymour, were kept out of the scrimmaging, although both showed up in uniform.

EDDIE SHORE DISSATISFIED WITH DUAL HOCKEY RULE

By BILL GRIMES

After the Bruins had dropped a 2 to 1 decision to Les Canadiens last night at the Boston Garden, Manager Art Ross and Eddie Shore went into a huddle.

FRANKIE ALERT . . . Frank Brimsek, Bruins goalie, was on the job when Marvin Wentworth, left defenseman of the Canadiens, tried to score in the first period. The Flying Frenchmen managed to squeeze two into the hemp, resulting in the Bruins losing, 2 to 1.

PASSING THE PUCK

Coach Pit Lepine has Les Canadiens off to the fastest start a French club has made in many seasons.

The Flying Frenchmen moved into a tie with the Maple Leafs for first place in the N. H. L. race . . . Like the Men of Smythe, Les Canadiens have four wins, one tie and nary a defeat to their credit.

Dick Dickey (Yulick), brother of the former Dartmouth football captain, who is now practicing medicine at Manchester, N. H., drives down from Franklin, N. H., to attend at of the Bruins' home games.

He goes right back home after each game and is at work at 8 o'clock the following morning . . . He must be seriously smitten by the hockey bugs to motor almost 200 miles to watch a game.

Johnny Gagnon, in that noir, is ailing and hasn't been in Les Canadiens' lineup since the regular season got underway.

Jules Dugal and Pit Lepine are very much concerned over Johnny's health and it may develop that the little right winger is through as a player.

The Bruins didn't spare the heat, particularly during the third period, when they were trailing.

CANADIENS CLICKING

Few Les Canadiens clubs have been able to withstand Bruins pressure when it has been applied at the Garden . . . The Flying Frenchmen are clicking and they'll be tougher to beat as soon as Marty Barry and Doug Young round into shape . . . Barry had nothing but the highest praise for Jim Norris and Jack Adams, the powers that be of the Detroit Red Wings.

"They were great to me," declared Marty. "They gave me my unconditional release, which allowed me to offer my services to Les Canadiens of my home city."

Aurel Joliat is refereeing in the Provincial League . . . Cecil Hart, who was let out as coach of Les Canadiens very unexpectedly a year ago, is still drawing his dough from that club . . . His contract will not expire until the close of the current season.

Louis Letourneau, who pooled his cash with Joe Cattarinich to purchase Les Canadiens from the Kennedy estate when the N. H. L. was an all Canadian organization and then sold out after a jam with Leo Dandurand, is now a director.

The Flying Frenchmen would not fade out of the picture as they did a few years ago, if Louis Letourneau had remained in the organization.

OFFER $10 HATS

Incidentally, Louis offered to buy every member of the Canadiens a $10 hat last week if they beat the Bruins in Montreal.

I wouldn't be surprised if each and every one of Pit Lepine's boys received a new "Christy" tomorrow.

Roy Conacher's shot is every bit as fast as that of his brother Charlie, when Chuck was in his prime . . . Roy's goal last night had Claude Bourque beaten from the time it left the blade of his stick.

Freddie Corcoran, tournament manager of the P. G. A., was an interested spectator at last night's game . . . He sat with his old pal Jesse Guilford, who took a night off as guardian of the East goal. The disputed goal was NOT in the net . . . If it had been the rabid fan who sits to the right of the goal judge would have been down Bill Cleary's throat.

Polly Drouin does plenty of cross checking, which is a dangerous type of hockey and one which the boys do not relish . . . Claude Bourque has been sensational this season . . . The rookie goal minder is responsible, in the main, for the great showing Les Canadiens have been making . . . "Pit" Lepine predicts that "Red" Goupille will develop into a star defense man.

Rutgers, Princeton In Grid Tilt

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP). Rutgers and Princeton, the only undefeated teams in the Eastern Intercollegiate lightweight football league, will meet in Rutgers Stadium, Thursday to decide the league championship and possibly the permanent ownership of the George Foster Sanford trophy.

The Scarlet has two ties on the record for the season while the Orange and Black has won all of its games to date.

At the end of the confab, Manager Ross stated that the publicity department would release the details and outcome of the conference tomorrow.

As to the question that Pres. Weston Adams and Art Ross will arrive at, this corner wouldn't know but it is aware of the fact that Eddie Shore is far from satisfied with the present arrangements.

A week ago, after he had sparked the Bruins to a 3 to 1 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks, Shore said that he was through with the Bruins until December 15 and added that it might be even later before he returned here.

The agreement between the Bruins and Shore is a screwy arrangement. After he purchased the Springfield Indians, Shore is said to have agreed to play in the Bruins' home games after December 15.

SHORE GOOD GATEMAN

He was excused from making any road trips with the Boston club when the Bruins returned for the opening home game of the season, Nov. 14. Shore was on the outer defense and the announcement that he was going to play stimulated the gate receipts.

After the Chicago game, Eddie packed his bag and hiked over the road to Springfield and declaring that he wouldn't be back for at least five weeks.

But, he was back last night, without the usual fanfare. And, it was very apparent to anyone who knows him that Eddie had something serious on his mind when he entered the Garden.

HOW THEY SCORED

But even Shore's presence couldn't hold the Canadiens. After the Bruins went ahead in the opening stanza when Conacher slapped home Mel Hill's rebound in the opening period, the invaders knotted the count in the second period and then packed the decision away midway in the final.

Toe Blake batted in a Doug Young rebound for the equalizer with Carl Robinson breaking the deadlock by batting in his own bouncing shot after taking a pass from Marty Barry.

Eddie Shore has considerable money invested in the Springfield Indians, a club which has been mismanaged for a couple of years. There's no city in this country or Canada better qualified to support minor league hockey than Springfield.

Shore, if he tends to his business, will make a cleanup. But if he is obliged to leave his own club to play with the Bruins in Boston, Shore is liable to go to the cleaners.

SHORE ATTRACTION

Although he isn't playing with his Indians, Shore is THE attraction. He's as much of an ideal in the City of Homes as he is here. Right now, the Indians aren't going so well. They have dropped four straight. The fans are beginning to demand Eddie's presence with Springfield.

They want a winner. They believe Shore can give them one, if he handles the club in every game. But, the ballyhoo which trumpets Eddie's coming and playing, isn't setting any too well with the other players. They appreciate Shore's ability as a player. But, they will not concede that he wins games single handed.

A continuance of the present arrangements might develop enough internal dissension to handicap the Bruins in the defense of the Stanley Cup.

Of course, the players' angle is known to Art Ross and will be given much consideration today while he and Pres. Adams are ironing out the Shore question.

The decision will be drawn up today and released tomorrow.

Invite School Fans To Help Coaches Name 'All' Team

By MICHAEL GILLOULY

Again this season, the Boston Evening American Board of Coaches will present schoolboy fans the official All-Scholastic football eleven but with a few slight changes in the rulings that have prevailed in previous years.

The coaches, instead of abiding by their own selections, will have the opinions of the fans to consider before the team is finally rounded into shape.

Therefore, you receive this invitation to help in picking the outstanding 11 players in the schoolboy ranks this season. A coupon, printed on this page, will help in lining up your club, and at the same time will prove convenient to the judges if you use it.

In other years the coaches of the board selected players within a 25-mile radius of Boston, which includes such schools as Haverhill, Lawrence, Brockton, and all North Shore teams. Whereas it would be practically impossible to judge the ability of players beyond these limits, you are requested to keep within this limit.

PICK ONE ELEVEN

As the coaches pick but one eleven, you are asked to do the same. Your choices may include the Boston schools, Catholic League entries and suburban schools.

There is no limit on the number of players from a certain school. As a matter of fact, you may nominate the entire starting team if you truthfully think the boys deserve it.

Intown fans, who do not follow the outside games, are invited to pick All-Boston players, every boy mentioned will be considered by the Board as eligible for the All-Scholastic.

This board, as in former years, will include Bill Oherberger, Boston English; Ed "Skip" Sherlock, Hyde Park; Fred Ostergren, Arlington; Bill Broderick, Salem; Jim Mansfield, Haverhill and Harry Downes, Brookline. Before Thanksgiving Day, this group will convene and then again after the big school holiday, they will meet to make final selections.

This will give you until Saturday, December 2, to file your "All" team. Shortly after that date, the entries will be considered and the official eleven announced.

FANS GIVEN CHANCE

So if you think your favorite lineman has been overlooked in spite of his fine play all year, here is your chance to nominate him for an All-Scholastic berth.

Season after season, school followers write letters complaining that this boy failed to be mentioned as all-scholastic. Well, here's the opportunity to get your local favorite a position that you think he has earned.

All entries will be welcomed so why not try your hand this year? Then maybe you'll realize that the job isn't quite so easy as you imagined it to be.

All-Scholastic Eleven

This blank is offered for your convenience in picking an all-scholastic team but it is not necessary that this coupon be used. Please mail entry to the All-Scholastic Board, care of Boston Evening American-Record, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. Nominations will close Dec. 2 after which the Board of Coaches will pick the official "All" team.

THE PUETT electrical starting gate, now in use at Maryland tracks, may be added to the equipment of New England race tracks next season. The merits of this gate are being investigated by the Racing Commissions of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

Contrary to general belief assistant starters are not put out of jobs by the Puett electrical starting gate. It is still necessary for the assistant starters to get the thoroughbreds into the stalls and to adjust the rear of the stalls so that the horses cannot back out of them.

Once the field is in position the start is a matter of routine. The pressing of a button opens the stalls that sends the thoroughbreds racing away from the barrier with an even start.

It was youthful Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt who first put the Puett electrical starting device into operation at Pimlico. Vanderbilt, like many other horse owners, has not been satisfied with some of the starts of races. Assistant starters often find themselves holding on to one horse after the start. This is particularly true when an assistant starter has to care for two horses. He finds it impossible to let go of both horses at the same time. One of the thoroughbreds must get the worst of it at the break.

In one mile races, such action proves particularly harmful. Unless a horse is with the leaders as he races around the clubhouse turn, he often gets jammed up and is put out of the competition.

There was a case at Pimlico where one of the starting boxes failed to open. Refunds were made to those bettors who had tickets on the horse that did not get away properly.

This caused some people to raise the point as to when a horse is a starter. Most racing rules hold that a horse is a starter once he leaves the paddock. If this were a hard and fast rule, a horse locked in one of the stalls would be considered a starter.

In Massachusetts, there is a rule that permits the stewards to do anything "to see that justice is done." It would certainly not be justice to fail to make a refund to a person who had a ticket on a horse that could not get started for reasons beyond the control of himself and his jockey.

Mechanical Devices Have Aided Racing

MECHANICAL devices have aided racing. Harry Day's "Eye in the Sky" that is used at Narragansett Park did more to eliminate disputes over close finishes than any other camera.

Day's camera also times the races. These times have been published in the racing edition of the Boston Evening American. Chart makers at one time tried to suppress some of Day's scientific findings as they proved that the mechanical attachments to the camera were more accurate than the human eye.

In numerous races, the chart caller makes mistakes after he goes beyond the first four or five horses. This has happened even in classics such as the Kentucky Derby. The camera has proved it is much more accurate than the human eye.

Before the camera, placing judges made frequent mistakes. Such mistakes often happened when distances of three-quarters of a length separated the first and second horses. One of the most glaring mistakes occurred at a Southern track five years ago.

It was raining and the track was very muddy. The first horse had a two-length margin on the field. The next four horses were bunched.

The placing judges put up their numbers, but before the race was declared official one of the stewards questioned the placing judges as to the identity of the horse declared the winner. The judges were quite sure they had called the right horse, and with doubt still in the steward's mind the race was declared official. Later a trainer rushed to the stand and declared his horse had won by two lengths, and was not even placed in the money. The placing judges then realized they had made a mistake, but as the official result had been posted the numbers could not be changed.

The owner of the track gave the owner of the horse that really won an amount of money equivalent to the purse, but the unfortunate bettors did not receive any payoff. Few of them realized the mistake that had been made.

The camera calls finishes accurately. Placing judges ask for pictures in all close finishes, and eliminate the possibility of mistakes.

Electric Timing Devices at New York Tracks

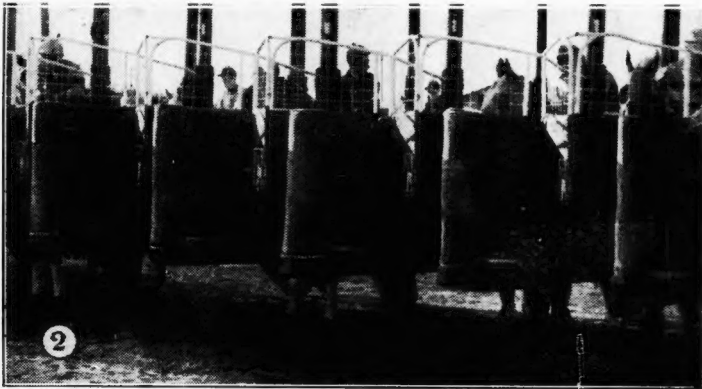

NEW YORK TRACKS have installed the electric timer, and they have found it much more satisfactory than the old fashioned system of timing races with a watch. When a race is timed by a watch, the timer watches for the dropping of the flag at the start, and then takes his time of the finish.

The electric timer is able to give the time of the entire field at different points in a race. It is particularly helpful to the handicappers who are trying to pick winners.

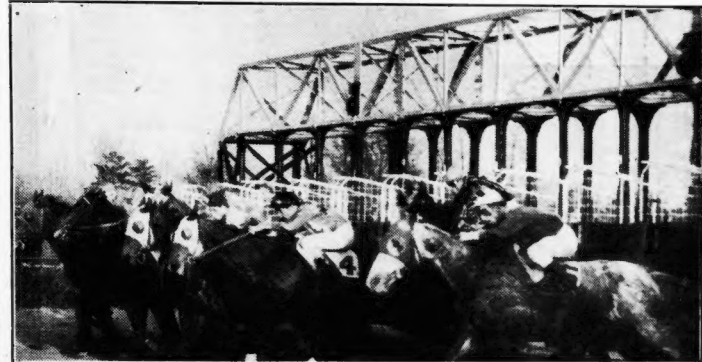

The electrical starting gate is another step forward for racing. If somebody could invent a gadget that would enable the bettors to come up with their share of winners, everybody would then be happy.

New Puett electrical starting gate in operation. Picture shows horses entering stalls, and assistant starters adjusting bar in rear of stalls.

The thoroughbreds are locked in the starting stalls, and waiting for the word to break. All horses are lined up even without an assistant tugging at them.

They're Off! The starter has pressed the button of the electrical gate, and as the gates at the front of the stalls open quickly the thoroughbreds dash out intent upon victory.

Goalless Max Leads League

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 22 (AP)—Max Kaminsky, Springfield goalless wonder, retained his scoring leadership in the International-American Hockey League, but the competition was getting tough.

Kaminsky, in the van since the season opened, was credited with no goals and 10 assists for a total of 10 points in league statistics.

HARLOW, POND ON AIR ON EVE OF BIG GAME

Friday night the students of Harvard and Yale will be celebrating, the two teams will be in seclusion far from the noise of the pre-game festivities, and the two opposing coaches will be battling it out over a nation-wide hookup at a celebration at the Harvard Club.

John Kieran of "Information, Please" fame will be the master of ceremonies, which will begin at 10:30 p. m.

Over a nation-wide hookup of the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company Dick Harlow and Ducky Pond of Yale will swap yarns and will comment on their respective teams on the eve of the great classic between the Johnnies and the Elms.

The Harvard and Yale bands will open the program with a series of college songs. Besides the tete-a-tete between Harvard's Dick Harlow and Yale's Ducky Pond, many leading sports writers and commentators will be included on the program.

The Yale team will leave New Haven early Friday morning by special train and upon their arrival in Boston will go directly to Soldier's Field where they will practice at 1:30.

After the last practice session of the year, the Cantab squad will go to Middlesex School to pass the night. The squad will hold their traditional banquet. Bobby Green, last year's grid leader, will drink a toast to Capt. Torby Macdonald.
